U.S. Home Boom Hikes B.C. Lumber

VANCOUVER (CP) — A United States home building boom has increased lumber prices in the British Columbia market from 15 to 20 per cent in the last 2½ months, and local builders fear prices will continue to climb.

Because U.S. builders are the Canadian lumber industry's biggest customers, accounting for half of its sales, they tend to set prices for the Canadian market as well. U.S. housing starts are expected to peak in the last quarter of 1977 at an annual rate of 1.93 million units.

The exchange rate, giving U.S. buyers a better deal for their dollar, hasn't helped as far as Canadian buyers are concerned.

"The mills are booked two months solid," said Paul Pannozzo, a lumber purchaser for the Lumberland retail chain. He said that Canadian buyers now are forced to bid higher prices in order to get enough material for their needs.

Pannozzo predicted that "unless California slows down on homebuilding," B.C. prices could go up additional $20 a thousand board feet by 1978. He said there could be a drop in November when cold weather sets in, but prices are likely to jump again in January.

As an example of the recent price jumps, Bob Swannell, general marketing manager for lumber at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., noted that western white spruce 2-B6-4S, considered something of a price indicator in the trade, were selling at $190 a thousand board feet on July 29 but had jumped to $209 by Friday.

He agreed that it's the U.S. housing boom causing the rapid price hikes here and noted that unlike Canada, the U.S. is building a larger number of single-family houses which consume a high percentage of framing lumber.

This year, said Swannell, the U.S. is likely to exceed its record year of 1972 for single-family dwelling starts.

He said that the U.S. boom came at the same time the B.C. forest industry had let production drop somewhat, so with inventory down and demand increasing, prices started rising.

In addition, he said, the demand came at a time of production drop-offs because of summer holidays and fire closures, especially in Washington and Oregon.

$2.9B DEBT IN 3 MONTHS

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government accumulated a budgetary deficit of $2.993 billion in the first three months of the fiscal year beginning last April 1, the finance department said Friday.

The deficit arose from spending of $9.861 billion and revenues of $6.868 billion.

The total budgetary deficit for the 1976-77 fiscal year was $6.3 billion.

PCB Poison Spreads At Porpoise Harbor

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Porpoise Harbor near here has the highest polychlorinate biphenyl (PCB) contamination in North America since an alleged chemical spill there by Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. in January, a federal biologist said Friday.

Otto Langer said Environment Canada tests of the area show contamination between 50,000 and 100,000 parts per million (PPM). He said the Great Lakes area, until recently the most contaminated area in North America, shows readings between 2,000 and 3,000 parts ber billion.

"Whether it was 1,000 or 70,000, my concern would be the same," he said.

"From an environmental point of view, this would be quite an unacceptable situation."

The PCBs in the harbor have spread since initial tests taken immediately after a transformer explosion at CanCel's Port Edwards mill Jan. 22, which is alleged to have caused the spill, he said.

Originally, material was found within 50 feet of the spill site, and in June tests, material was found 200 feet away, Langer said.

A fishing closure in the harbor will be in effect for some time, Langer said, and the longer PCBs are left in the harbor the more likely it is that they will enter the food chain.

Langer said Environment Canada has recently sent a letter to CanCel ordering a cleanup of the PCBs in the harbor. If CanCel ignores the order, Environment Canada will undertake the cleanup and attempt to recover the estimated $100,000 cost from CanCel in court, he said.

Donald Best, CanCel vice-president of operations, said CanCel has cleaned up the land contamination from the transfer explosion, and does not know what else to clean up.

Charges against CanCel with regard to the explosion are still proceeding and Best said they "change the whole flavor of the cleanup.

Little AIB Effect On Purchasing Power

The purchasing power of B.C. wage and salary earners increased during the first 18 months of the federal Anti-Inflation Program at about the same rate that it did a year before the program.

This is the tentative conclusion reached in an article in the latest issue of the labor research bulletin put out by the provincial labor ministry.

The article entitled B.C. bargaining and earnings since the AIB, attempts to show how B.C. employees have fared since the controls were imposed in October, 1975.

The author, Jerry Meadows of the research and planning branch, cautions that his review is not an attempt to determine whether the controls program has been directly responsible for any changes in trends.

"Many other factors may simultaneously be influencing some of the above-mentioned data and thus unravelling cause-and-effect is rife with difficulties."

One set of data used is the average weekly earnings figures for firms in B.C. employing 20 or more. These figures represent about 40 to 45 per cent of the work force and include the non-union sector.

The article says the increases in the average weekly earnings seemed to peak at 17.7 per cent in the second quarter of 1975.

Since the controls were introduced and up until the end of last March, the earnings have been increasing 12.7 per cent per year, compared to 14.2 per cent in the 18 months prior to controls and 15.2 per

HIJACKER SHUT OUT

BRINDISI, Italy (Reuter) — A young Arab who hijacked a French airliner was captured early today when he stepped from the plane to check on refuelling at Brindisi airport and the crew slammed the door behind him.

Police said they overpowered Egyptian student Tarek el Khater, 19, when he was left stranded on the tarmac. The 210 passengers and 12 crew still aboard the Air France airbus were freed unharmed.

Twenty other passengers were released earlier in the seven-hour hijack in exchange for fuel.

The police account of the hijacker's capture differed from an earlier version given by an interior ministry spokesman. He said Khater was captured when the pilot pushed him out of the aircraft into the arms of police.

Khater, armed with an axe and packages which he said contained explosives, seized the wide-bodied jet Friday shortly after it left Nice on a flight from Paris to Cairo.

He demanded to be flown to Libya but was turned away from Benghazi airport there and also from Athens.

The airbus was allowed to land at Brindisi in southeastern Italy after the pilot warned he had only 11 minutes fuel left.

The agreement to refuel the plane came after two hours of negotiations. Khater, who police said was from Cairo, was captured at 1 a.m. when he left the plane to make sure the instructions were being carried out.

After he was taken to police headquarters for questioning, a passenger said Khater "seemed to be mad" during the plane's Mediterranean odyssey in search of an airport.

He kept spraying his body with perfume and reciting the phrase "to be or not to be" from Shakespeare's Hamlet over the airliner's public-address system.

The passenger said the hijacker also referred frequently to three purported accomplices who he claimed were aboard. He called them "X-one," "X-two" and "X-three."

It appeared, however, that he acted alone.

BRAZIL GRABS COFFEE

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Is Brazil preparing to corner the world coffee market?

As representatives of the Brazilian Coffee Institute, a government marketing agency, conceded in terse statements issued in three world capitals this week, Brazil is buying green unroasted coffee beans "wherever" it can find them — 800,000 bags from warehouses in New York and London and from the government of Colombia.

The substantial holdings of the Brazilian government trading company, Interbras, of the expiring September futures contract traded on the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange also is cited by government and industry sources as evidence of a move to monopolize the market.

The Interbras holdings, the size of which are not known publicly, are of immediate concern to exchange officials and the federal U.S. agency which regulates futures trading.

In an unusual move taken to prevent a default of the September coffee contract, officials of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the exchange have made personal visits to Interbras and other firms holding major "long" or buy-side contracts.

Their request has been simple enough: Liquidate slowly before the first delivery notice day so prices are not artificially inflated.

RAPID SAILPAST 'NEVER INTENDED'

The naval sailpast part of the Silver Jubilee celebrations Friday was never intended to be a high-speed search and destroy manoeuvre, armed forces spokesman Denny Ryan said today.

The navy is sorry if some people were disappointed by the speed of the ships but they were assuming something was going to take place that was never planned by the navy, he said.

Ryan said a lot more people would have been upset if the ships had gone by at high speed. The wake of the destroyers would have created havoc, swamping small craft, he said.

The two destroyers, four minesweepers and six smaller craft were part of the Pacific training squadron, and the sailpast was only to show the public an example of the vessels in the training squadron.

Members of the official party also expected a little more action out of the navy.

Ald Frank Carson said: "I guess they'll first sail slowly by and then return for their high-speed manoeuvre."

Alex Adamson, co-ordinator of the jubilee events, wasn't taking any flack for what was happening.

"That was entirely the navy's show," he said. "Nothing to do with me. You just don't order the navy around."

Other events went off much better and the military parade through town drew a good response.

Huge Coffee Theft

BRUSSELS (AP) — An international theft ring has stolen 1,150 tons of raw coffee valued at $10 million to $11.5 million, the Belgian daily "La Libre Belgique" reported today. The coffee, grown in eastern Zaire and stolen in transit, found its way into the markets of Europe and the United States.

Body Found

The body of a person was found today floating in the water about 100 yards off William Head federal prison. A prison guard on patrol made the discovery shortly before 11 a.m. Colwood RCMP are investigating.

MP 'Paid' For Fire

COWANSVILLE, Que. (CP) — A witness at a fire commissioner's hearing testified Friday that Social Credit MP Gilbert Rondeau paid him $1,500 last December to set fire to a building owned by Rondeau.

Quebec Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delages recommended that Rondeau be charged with arson along with two young men from the nearby Granby area — Jacques Harbec and Jean Bernier.

Three weeks ago Rondeau was fined $5,050 for fraudulent tax evasion resulting from his participation in a party fund-raising scheme.

The fire destroyed a two-storey building in the nearby Eastern Townships town of Bromont on Dec. 20, the same day that Rondeau was attending the funeral of Social Credit leader Real Caouette in Rouyn, about 400 miles away.

Harbec testified that Rondeau wanted to get rid of the building. He said he accepted an offer from the MP to set it afire.

"I needed money and Mr. Rondeau offered me $1,500 as well as a guarantee for a discotheque that I wanted to open," Harbec said. "I first refused this offer but after two or three similar requests I accepted."

Air Controllers Rebuff Demand to End Slowdown

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air traffic controllers at Canada's two major airports in Montreal and Toronto have apparently rebuffed a request by union leaders to end a work slowdown that has delayed some flights for up to three hours.

"I tried to give them reason, but I wouldn't say my arguments were falling on receptive ears," Jim Livingston, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association said after a meeting with 25 members Friday.

He said there was "considerable opposition" to his pleas for normal standards of operation.

PRIZE ERROR

Typographic gremlins got into the Prevue Puzzle section in Friday's Times. The prize offered this week is not $3,000 as appeared but $300 as provided in the rules where $50 is added each week when there is no winner.

Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers are bitter over federal government action this week which legislated an end to their four-day legal walkout and imposed a settlement in their nine-month contract dispute.

Livingston could not say when the militant air traffic controllers would restore normal operations. The CATCA president added he understood why they were taking such action, but he did not agree with it.

Young Boy Prostitutes Prowl Vancouver, Police Say

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police say that more than 200 boys, some of them as young as 12 years old, are acting as male prostitutes in the city's downtown area and some are blackmailing their clients or posing for pornographic movies.

Officials say that it may lead to tragedies such as the murder of a 12-year-old Toronto boy last month after a homosexual orgy.

Constable Al Robson, who has been working on the homosexual scene for nine months, says that "eventually you know what's going to happen — a guy's going to get wiped out."

Police also fear crime figures may attempt to organize the racket, as they have done in United States cities.

Constable Gordon Bader says that Vancouver already is recognized as a major centre for male juvenile prostitution.

Police and social workers believe boys are being recruited in Vancouver and sent to homosexuals as far away as New York and Los Angeles.

Social worker Mel Motley says that only a few of the boys are hardcore prostitutes. Most of them mix hustling with drug pushing, theft and other crimes.

Robson and Bader say pimps are beginning to discover the lucrative nature of juvenile prostitution and some are moving in.

Six persons were arrested in April after a male juvenile prostitution ring was uncovered.

Robson says many of the boys are transients from single-parent or low-income families.

"They're generally in it for the bucks," Bader says. "It's easy money and the risks of being charged or convicted are negligible."

Jim Maitland, a vice squad detective, says some of the boys live with older homosexuals, who support them, giving them drugs, food and money.

He says police can do little to keep boys from hustling except talk to them or refer them to social agencies.

Child welfare authorities usually try to send the boys home, Maitland says, but they seldom succeed.

Robson and Bader are trying to fight the problem by working with the city's homosexual community which they say is concerned about the situation. Workers at homosexual organizations often are able to dissuade the boys from continuing in the hustling business, they say.

One male prostitute, Mark, says he has hustled all over North America — from Seattle to Los Angeles to Toronto — since he started in the trade at age 13.

He says he has been involved in blackmail schemes, posed for pornographic movies and photographs and engaged in all manners of sex acts for countless customers.

Mark says he makes $50 to $60 a night, but could make much more if he tried harder.

Canadian Dollar Slump Likely to Continue

NEW YORK (CP) — Business Week says most financial observers expect the sagging Canadian dollar, which hit an eight-year low of 92.67 Thursday, to settle at about 95 cents in terms of U.S. funds for the next year.

"Whether this is the best rate for economic growth depends upon which segment of the business community is making a judgment," the business magazine says in its current issue.

The magazine said the immediate causes of the weakness in the dollar are an annual current-account deficit of $4 billion and a sharp drop in Canadian borrowing abroad. Compounding the dollar's decline was the poor performance of the Canadian economy, with real growth of only 3.5 per cent producing job layoffs and depressing capital spending.

"Next year's prospects are not much better. If, as expected, wage and price controls are phased out next year, inflation could climb even higher. Such a development will hardly slow the flow of Canadian investment abroad; more than $2 billion has gone into U.S. real estate alone this year. Consequently, even optimists are calling for no more than a five-per-cent real growth next year."

But the weak Canadian dollar was not a disaster for all Canadian companies. Forest products and metals companies have had a poor year but will boost profits if export markets hold up.

The magazine noted that MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., the pulp and paper giant, gets an extra $2.5 million in after-tax profits each time the dollar drops one cent "because its exports are denominated in U.S. dollars."

Canadian companies which must import raw materials and parts or borrow heavily abroad are not so fortunate. Willifred C. Chick, vice-president of finance for the Steel Company of Canada, is quoted as saying a weak dollar increases his company's cost of doing business "because we buy more than we sell outside Canada." The company buys iron ore, coal and some capital equipment in the U.S.

Ontoria Hydro, one of Canada's biggest international borrowers, would have to pay far more for its loans if the dollar did not recover substantially.

"NIXON-STYLE SPYING?

By RON CLISGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — NDP leader Ed Broadbent Friday expressed fears the government may have used "Nixon tactics" in compiling files on its political opponents.

Noting the Nixon method proved "disastrous" for the former United States president, Broadbent demanded to know whether the solicitor-general's department actually does have a reported file on his personal background.

If the file exists, he wants to see it as soon as possible.

Published reports Thursday quoted an official who worked in the solicitor-general's office as saying details of Broadbent's personal life were kept on file before he became NDP leader in 1975.

In a letter delivered by hand Friday to the office of Solicitor-General Francis Fox, Broadbent claimed there is "not the slightest item in my past which could be construed by anyone with an ounce of sanity to have negative security implications."

At a news conference, Broadbent told reporters a personal reflection on his background — boys' choir member, Queen's scout, and RCAF officer turned up nothing sinister.

"But," he mused, "like Dalton Camp and Pierre Trudeau I went to the London School of Economics. I think that may have done it."

Broadbent noted Fox was out of the country and Robin Bourne, head of the police and security planning and analysis branch of the department — in whose office the file was reported discovered — was at a cottage and could not be contacted.

Broadbent said reports of the files on himself and others, "leave the implication that our security forces are indiscriminately spying on Canadians in every walk of life."

He said he was less concerned for himself and other MPs than for "the vast marjority of Canadians" who are not in such a good position to defend themselves."

He suggested the files were creating — in their distribution among government officials — "slanderous impressions of innocent men and women."

MAIL BOX DUMPED

Post office officials were busy this morning recovering a large red mail box someone had tossed into the Gorge waterway at the foot of Wyndeatt.

A passer-by spotted the box at 9 a.m. in 10 feet of water, a Saanich police spokesman said.

It is not known whether there was any mail in the box. It had been cleared at 5 p.m. Friday.

Anyone who thinks he may have deposited mail in the box after that time is asked to contact the post office.

VIPs Dig Vander Zalm Shovel

They are sterling silver.

But you must be someone special to get one — a hard-working employee of his ministry or a dignitary visiting his office.

Vander Zalm has been passing out the miniature shovels as a goodwill gesture, a spokesman said Friday. The minister pays for them himself.

The spokesman said the idea is strictly Vander Zalm's and of course stems from his controversial remark when sworn into the cabinet on Dec. 2, 1975.

"If anybody is able to work but refuses to pick up a shovel we will have ways and means of dealing with him," he said then.

On the top are the words "Hoe, Hoe Hoe!"

Big Sur Still Ablaze

United Press International

The vast Big Sur forest fire near the central California coast today resisted with a vengeance the efforts of an army of fire-fighters.

And lightning — as predicted — added a host of new problems for California's fire-fighting force. More than 10 blazes were sparked by lightning Friday in the north state.

The Big Sur fire, given the name Marble Cone, has charred more than 100,000 acres of rugged wilderness in the Los Padres National Forest since it was sparked by lightning 13 days ago.

Gusty winds early Friday sent the flames leaping over firelines and rivers. The fire-fighting force was beefed up from 4,000 to 5,400 to combat the renewed impact of the blaze.

"Backfires" were torched on the north and east sides of the fire. One fire official at first said the wind had turned the fire into a "monster," but firemen later said the wind blew the "backfires" into the heart of the inferno.

Harmac Mill Dispute Continuing

No end is in sight for the labor dispute that shut MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac mill near Nanaimo on Thursday.

Some 1,450 employees of the pulp mill and the two adjoining sawmills are off the job apparently over a 35-cent-an-hour dispute involving two men.

A management spokesman said that during the current contract negotiations with the Pulp and Paperworkers Union, the company offered two chipper knife grindermen $7.43 an hour and agreed to submit the rate to arbitration.

The union wanted $7.78 an hour, he said.

Real Earnings Little Changed

The article says consumer prices in Vancouver increased at a rate of 9.5 per cent a year between October, 1975, and April of this year.

In the 18 months preceeding the federal controls, Vancouver consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 11.9 per cent.

The article then balances the earning increases against the rising prices to come up with the annual rate of change in "real earnings."

In the six quarters since the AIB's inception, real earnings have increased an average of 2.9 per cent a year, roughly the same jump as was experienced during the 12 months preceeding the controls.

In the 18 months prior to the controls real earnings increased by an average of 2.1 per cent a year.

"So from this it might tentatively be concluded that since the AIB came into existence the purchasing power of wage and salary earners has continued to rise at just about the same rate as in the year before the program," the article says.

Between Oct. 14, 1975, when the controls were brought in and the end of last March there were 325 wage settlements in B.C. covering about 160,000 workers.

"During this time, wage increases — prior in most cases to any rollbacks — have averaged 10.5 per cent per year."

In the 18 months period prior to controls, wage settlements averaged 17.8 per cent. There were 503 reported settlements in this period covering about 220,000 employees.

The article also contains statistics to show there is a move away from cost-of-living-allowance clauses but that, in terms of coverage of workers in the province, COLAs still prevail to a considerable extent.

Statistics also show the introduction of the anti-inflation program has perpetuated the trend to shorter collective agreements.

In another item, the labor ministry also says it was conservative in its earlier estimate of the number of contracts up for renewal this year.

the weather

The weather was sunny and warm throughout B.C. on Friday with record afternoon fermperatures being set at a few locations. Lytton at 39 degrees was again the Canadian hot spot. Most areas of the province will be sunny and warm again on Sunday. There will be overnight fog patches along the open coast. A few showers or thundershowers will develop in most Interior areas on Sunday.

IRA Had Planned Time-Bomb Blast for Queen

By GILLIAM LINSCOTT
Manchester Guardian

BELFAST — The bomb that exploded on the New University of Ulster campus at Coleraine five hours after Queen Elizabeth II had left it on Thursday night was in place there throughout her visit, primed by a long-delay timing device to go off at a time when it would cause maximum disruption and panic.

Only a slip-up by a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb technician prevented the one-to-two-pound explosive device from going off about midday on Thursday, while the Queen was touring the university buildings and while hundreds of school children were beginning to assemble for an afternoon pageant on the university grounds.

The IRA was using a device that could give a delay of several days or even weeks between the planting of a bomb and its explosion. They have never before used such a complex system and had been probably saving it for some time for the Queen's visit.

The Provisionals, an extremist faction of the IRA, knew that the device was in the botanical gardens on the edge of the university campus when they confidently issued their statement, about half an hour before the Queen landed by helicopter at Coleraine, boasting that security on the campus had been breached and warning that all members of the public should leave the area.

On the decision of Britain's Northern Ireland Secretary, Roy Mason, taken a few minutes before the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh left the royal yacht Britannia to fly to Coleraine, the visit to the university went ahead. A last-minute search of buildings and grounds failed to find anything and the visit passed without incident, the Queen leaving about 5:15 p.m.

At 9:50 on Thursday evening the bomb exploded on the edge of the botanic gardens, about 150 yards away from the nearest university building, which was itself several hundred yards away from the areas where the Queen met her guests and walked through a youth pageant staged by 1,800 children.

Friday morning, the Provisional IRA put out another statement repeating that security had been breached and claiming that a bomb had been planted to explode one and a half hours after the warning had been given on Thursday morning, that is about noon, when the Queen was touring the university buildings, the guests for the official luncheon were beginning to arrive, and bus loads of school children were assembling for the pageant.

Security forces ridiculed the IRA claim Friday and the official police theory was that the bomb had been planted after the Queen left in an attempt by the Provisionals to regain face after their failure to disrupt the royal visit.

But independent sources confirmed Friday that the Provisional IRA version was substantially correct. The bomb was there when the Queen's visit began and may have been put into position as long as several days before, possibly at the same time as the one that exploded in the same area on Tuesday.

It might even have been there on July 29, when a bomb fitted with a similar long-term timing device was found in a lavatory inside the university building. The implications of the timing device were played down by the security forces at the time, probably to avoid even more public apprehension about the royal visit.

The placing of Thursday night's bomb and its small size suggests that the provisions were deliberately trying not to injure the queen or any of her visitors but rather to score a propaganda success and to cause panic that might have thrown the day's celebrations into disorder.

The device was several hundred yards away from the area visited by the queen or her guests, but the explosion would have been loud enough to be heard all over the campus. If it had gone off as planned, at about midday, Mason and the security forces would have been faced with the dilemma of calling off the pageant and garden party for 2,000 guests and handing the Provisionals their greatest propaganda success, or carrying on, with the risk that there was another bomb concealed somewhere on the grounds.

As it was, the bomb technician's miscalculation, probably caused by unfamiliarity with the sophisticated timing equipment, caused a serious propaganda defeat when IRA failed to make good the boast made on the morning of the royal visit.

DEAL ON FOOD PRICES?

HALIFAX (CP) — Statistics Canada figures suggest there may have been an unpublicized agreement, now expired, between the federal government and the food processing industry to stabilize the price of food, a Nova Scotia economist said Friday.

Dr. Ervin Doak of St. Mary's University said he bases his theory on the fact that food prices were stable after the anti-inflation board was created in 1975 but at the beginning of 1977 food prices began to rise again.

He said he surmises that an expiry at the end of 1976 of an agreement between the government and the food industry would account for the sudden rise.

"Obviously something is going on which is not being made public," said Doak.

Statistics Canada announced earlier Friday a 2.1-per-cent rise in the cost of food in July.

Lower Fares Monday

GENEVA (Reuter) — Airlines flying between Europe and North America are expected to announce lower rates on Monday to compete with cheap London-New York flights to be started next month by the British charter firm Laker Airways, airline sources said Friday.

The sources said more than 20 airlines, meeting here for the last three days, have narrowed differences over how to compete with the no-frills Laker "Skytrain" service.

They said that technical details will be worked out during the weekend and an announcement will be made on Monday.

A spokesman for the International Air Transport Association (IATA), at whose headquarters the airlines met, said only that "the situation looks extremely favorable."

The airline sources said the agreement package will include "general price cuts based on systems already discussed here" by the airlines last month in an effort to cut into the expected rush to the Laker flights.

These include the budget fare proposed by Pan American Airways and a special standby fare advanced by Trans World Airlines (TWA). British Airways said it would agree to these systems only if cuts also were made in the advance purchase excursion (APEX) fare between London and New York.

Pan Am, TWA and British Airways are the three lines most affected by the planned Laker service.

Another Setback For Vance Mission

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance returns here today from 11 days of Middle East negotiations, but the high U.S. hopes he carried with him for an early breakthrough towards peace are almost gone.

It was only three weeks ago that President Carter, concluding an unexpectedly harmonious two days of talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin, said: "We see the reconvening of the Geneva conference in October as being likely."

But Vance, as he fought to bridge Arab-Israeli differences on such issues as Palestinian rights and Israeli withdrawals, quickly found that optimism to be misplaced.

Short of an unforeseen breakthrough, it is widely viewed here now that there is little likelihood of the Geneva peace conference being reconvened this year, or even a meeting of the U.S. proposed preparatory working group.

Vance's hopes that at least he could keep the momentum going by further contacts with Arab and Israeli foreign ministers when the United Nations convenes its General Assembly session in New York next month were also dealt a setback Friday.

Spectacular Copter Rescue From 19,000-Foot Peak

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A Soviet helicopter pilot has carried out a spectacular rescue operation 19,200 feet up the country's highest peak in an attempt to save the life of a distinguished scientist, informed sources said today.

The victim, flown to hospital from the 24,590-foot Mount Communism, was Rem Khokhlov, rector of Moscow University and vice-president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

His death last Monday was reported in the official Soviet media but it had not been previously linked to a Tass news agency account of a dramatic helicopter rescue from the ice-covered mountain.

The sources said Khokhlov, 51, an avid climber and specialist in high-altitude physics, was a member of a 12-man scientific expedition in the Pamirs, a mountain chain straddling the borders of the Soviet Union, Afghanistan and China.

He became ill with exposure and a lung ailment while the team was retreating in a freezing storm after the death of one of its members at the 23,000-foot level, the sources said.

Captain Igor Ivanov, a veteran mountain pilot of the Soviet Aeroflot airline, flew his M14 helicopter on to a small plateau at 19,200 feet in response to a radio distress call.

The eight-ton machine, which has a theoretical 18,000-foot ceiling, could only lift off again after being stripped of all but essential parts and drained of extra fuel.

Khokhlov was flown from a local hospital to Moscow where he died four days later, the sources said.

Chile Disbands Torture Unit

Washington Post

SANTIAGO, Chili — The Directorate of National Intelligence (DINA), Chili's dreaded secret police named by international human-rights organizations as responsible for the torture and disappearance of hundreds of political dissenters, has been ordered dissolved, the government announced Friday.

The announcement came as U.S. assistant secretary of state Terence Todman began his second day of interviews with government officials and leaders of opposition political parties and labor unions.

Eight members of a group calling itself "Relatives of Missing Detainees" were arrested as they tried to approach Todman before one of the interviews.

The government statement said DINA had been dissolved because it "had completed the delicate national security functions with which it was entrusted." A new intelligence organism, the National Intelligence Centre (CNI), will be established, the statement said.

Government press officer Max Reindl said the CNI will not be authorized to make arrests and that its function would be "purely informational." He added that Col. Manuel Contreras, director of DINA, would not have a post in the new information organization.

DINA has been the centre of the controversy about human-rights violations in Chile because of its powers to make secret arrests without charges and to maintain hidden interrogation centres where political prisoners are held.

Numerous former prisoners have testified before international human rights protection organizations that they were tortured while in DINA interrogation centres and that some fellow prisoners were never seen again.

Dissolution of DINA has been one of the points pushed by the United States as a step toward improved relations with Chile.

Chile, in turn, has rejected all U.S. aid since Congress last year suspended military aid to the country because of alleged violations of human rights by Chile's military rulers.

The military government, stung by human rights criticism from Chilean exiles and others outside the country, apparently would like Todman to return to Washington with the belief that respect for human rights has increased in recent months.

Shirking His Responsibility

There was an interesting exchange on the subject of university faculty salaries in the B.C. legislature a couple of weeks back that deserves more attention than it got. Hansard contains the question-and-answer session between Education Minister Pat McGeer and Conservative Leader Scott Wallace.

The Tory had asked the minister if "despite his respect for university autonomy" he would be "taking any action to advise the universities council that this business of keeping fees the same for many years and then suddenly increasing them by (up to) 32 per cent really makes very little sense and produces very severe hardship" for the student.

It should be pointed out that fees at the three universities were increased for the coming term for the first time in more than a decade. Fees have generally been frozen for most students at under $500 a year since the mid-1960. But Wallace is right — a sudden jump of the magnitude he described tends to throw a student's careful budgeting of his limited funds all out of kilter.

McGeer's reply? He was careful to maintain a hands-off attitude, though he was just as concerned about the problem. He thought that the universities would not have had to increase fees, or at least increase them so much, if the faculty had not received "a very generous increase" in pay.

"The base increase wasn't all that great, but it was slipped in on the basis of experience, merit, promotions and this kind of thing," said the minister. Simon Fraser University was the worst offender, according to the minister's statistics, and it granted faculty "extremely generous settlements and they did it at the expense of the students." The percentage increase was 10.65 per cent.

Our own University of Victoria wasn't far behind, at 10.04 per cent, although McGeer didn't single it out for special mention. All three universities appear to have handed faculty at least a 10-per-cent raise. UBC in Vancouver was much more discreet about the matter; its board of governors issued a terse statement which referred to a basic 6.25 per cent increase for faculty.

The icing on the plain cake makes up the difference. No figures were cited, but the UBC board gave its professors on top of the 6.25 per cent money for "career progress" (supposedly which can be withheld but in practice rarely is) plus "merit increases" plus extra to "correct salary anomalies." The board refused to give a percentage breakdown on the extras, but it seems highly unlikely UBC would be far behind its counterpart institution.

UVic is not so coy about providing details. Its faculty will get a basic increase of 6.8 per cent (isn't that by itself outside the anti-inflation guidelines?) and there is a 3.24 per cent package on top of that for merit, determined by department heads. For just "satisfactory progress" faculty will get 2.76 percentage points of this package (a spokesman candidly admits that few faculty will not get this) and for "exceptional progress" a small number — one in 20 — will get the topmost half-percentage point in higher pay.

This pay grab by university faculty is clearly above the guidelines in spirit, if not in law. All the fol-de-rol about "merit" pay simply exploits a loophole through which the university boards of governors and their willing buccaneer faculty have sailed their pirate ship. It is exceedingly difficult to believe that almost all of the staff at UVic have that "quality of deserving well; excellence, worth," according to the Oxford definition of merit. Everybody gets it, therefore it should be considered part of the basic salary increase.

What is the minister of education prepared to do about the situation? He believes "in individual responsibility at the school board level and at the university level."

"We'd rather have the discipline of the marketplace and the light of public opinion lead to self-correction of the system, because in the long run it's our belief that that's much healthier," added McGeer.

"I think if the provincial government starts to monkey around in the affairs of individual school boards and in the affairs of individual universities and colleges, we're going to have a big brotherism of a kind that we've never had before in this province."

That is beside the point. The government "interferes" now with school boards and universities. It appoints a large number of the governors of the universities. It names the members of the universities council, which divides up among the three universities the annual allocation of provincial funds. School boards are subject to all kinds of restrictions and controls from Victoria.

Of course, at the bottom of McGeer's mind is the fear that somehow the academic freedom of universities, their untrammelled right to teach, research, write and speak freely without fear of reprisal from the authorities, might be affected. It is an important safeguard, the basic guarantee of the universities' existence. That is why professors have tenure.

But to stretch the doctrine to cover faculty salaries is ridiculous. Some students are going to suffer this fall because of higher fees which are directly the result of the excessive salary settlement for faculty. The public is going to suffer, because it ultimately pays the bills. Next year when the universities come to the government asking for operating grants, the new higher salaries will be built into the demands. And if 10 per cent is what faculty get while anti-inflation controls are in force at six per cent this year what in the great blue sky will they shoot for next year when the controls come off?

It's fine for McGeer to talk of "individual responsibility" but he is one individual who is shirking his responsibility in merely talking a good line but refusing to act. Taking a firm line on faculty salaries has nothing to do with what research a professor carries on or what he says in a lecture.

Victoria City Council: Good Men, Bad System

A visit to a regular meeting of Victoria city council leaves one with two overwhelming impressions — one good, one not-so-good.

Good news first. Our city council seems to be a group of sincere and dedicated persons who are honestly doing their best to grapple with the problems of governing a medium-sized urban centre. It appears that in virtually all cases our aldermen put the good of the city first and the making of political brownie points second (a far cry from a certain other legislative body that meets a few blocks south of city hall). Now for the not-so-good news — an apparent serious weakness in council's procedures. A two-hour visit cannot help but convince one that those procedures were designed to make it as difficult as possible for ordinary citizens to learn about, understand, or take any active role in city government. It would be only slightly more difficult to understand what was going on if all the aldermen spoke only ancient Phoenician.

Under the system, a clerk-like fellow (it used to be city clerk but Victoria abolished that position a while ago) reads out each piece of business as it comes up. He reads at roughly the speed of an auctioneer encouraging the bidding, and woe betide anyone who has not acquired an agenda so he can follow along.

Once this is completed, the aldermen move, second and carry the appropriate motion to deal with the business. Discussion appears to be virtually nonexistent, and any casual observer might be forgiven for thinking that council has a unanimity of mind almost never found in groups larger than one.

That isn't really the case, of course. What happens is that the great part of discussion takes place at committee meetings (held a week or so prior to full council meetings). From those committee meetings (each committee is composed of half the aldermen), some sort of consensus usually appears. Therefore, discussion is needed at full council meetings only if either (a) some change in a situation has occurred since the committee meeting, or (b) an alderman from another committee has an urgent question or objection about some matter.

In one case at last week's meeting where a situation apparently had changed since the committee meeting, the aldermen referred it back to the committee after about 90 seconds of debate.

In one other case, an alderman asked one quick question about a committee recommendation, and something that resembled an explanation was given him. (It had to do with the city selling a building in James Bay for $42,500, and the explanation was that the city had bought the building for $43,500 but actually it was only worth $38,500, so the city was doing better than it had hoped in selling it. Or something like that.)

Bylaws were given final approval with no discussion or explanation whatever, but presumably most of these had gone to a public hearing where those affected could find out more about them.

In one bylaw — the one to raise the mayor's and aldermen's salaries by six per cent — an amendment was needed. One alderman moved changes in a long list of figures, another seconded it, and it was passed without a word of explanation as to what it meant. For all the watching public knew, council might have decided to raise its salaries by 60 per cent instead of six. (In fact, the change was a housekeeping matter dealing with problems of retroactivity, but you couldn't find that out by going to the council meeting.)

The result of this system is that council took about 50 minutes to go through a seven-page agenda.

Clearly the system is highly efficient, but it makes it impossible for a civic-minded citizen to become involved through the normal procedure of attending council meetings. On the surface, it seems the answer is simple — those civic-minded citizens should go to committee meetings instead. Unfortunately, it isn't that easy for the poor citizen — committee meetings are open to the press but not to the general citizenry. If council wants to continue the efficient committee system of doing business, it simply has to change that.

Once the business meeting was over, council went into a "hearing" format to question a delegation from the Greater Victoria library board on the subject of the need for a new central library. And here the strength of the individuals on council showed clearly.

Every alderman asked reasonable, intelligent questions about the costs of the proposed move, about the adequacy of the new facilities, about possible alternatives that would be cheaper and-or work better.

No one took the opportunity to cast aspersions on other councils, the library board, the provincal government (past or present) or other members of council. Aldermen argued back and forth with each other, but it was done in a quiet, reasonable way with the emphasis entirely on issues, not on personalities.

If council would bring its procedures up to as high a standard as its level of debate, Victoria might well have a civic government we could all be justly proud if. — B.McL.

Help for Labor Problems

LONDON — A waitress in Birmingham was fired for hitting a customer over the head with a menu.

The staff of the Night Out theatre-restaurant walked out and ACAS was called in.

ACAS, the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, is an independent British government agency which has found fame as a controversial third party to the Grunwick dispute.

In the emotional climate hanging over the North London dispute at the Grunwick Film Processing Laboratory, ACAS has been criticized both for having too much power and too little.

Its report recommending recognition of a trade union at Grunwick will shortly go before the House of Lords on final appeal. ACAS won in the high court and lost in the court of appeal. One of its members, Jack Jones, head of the Transport and General Workers Union, has vowed to seek changes in the law, tightening up ACAS powers if necessary, and the annual conference of the Trades Union Congress will debate it next month.

But, as the case of the wilful waitress demonstrates, ACAS gets involved in a lot of other matters, not all of them necessarily to do with union recognition.

Other Matters

However, out of 850 cases which did involve union recognition, only one other has gone to litigation: ACAS lost when the court granted an order restraining it from sending a questionnaire to employees of the Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd. who already had formed a staff association rather than a union.

This is only a fraction of the work of ACAS. During 1976, the agency received no fewer than 390,000 inquiries from business and labor. It handled 40,000 cases of individual grievance. "Many of these were relatively insignificant and nobody ever hears about them" a spokesman said.

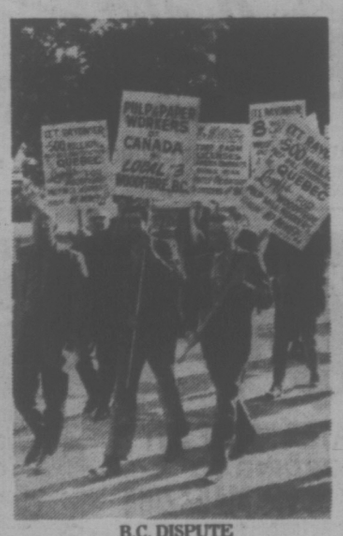
ACAS itself sometimes acts as an arbitration board, if the parties agree, as they did in 320 cases last year in which the ACAS findings were accepted.

But the statistic at which the ACAS spokesman pointed most proudly was the 77 per cent success rate in handling 3,500 cases of "collective conciliation" — real, major disputes over contract agreements.

ACAS consists of a chairman, who is Jim Mortimer, former paid officials of the Draughtsmans and Allied Technicians Association, appointed by the government, and nine council members. Three of these are nominees of the Trades Union Congress, three of the Confederation of British Industry and three are selected by the government from the academic community.

Under them is a staff of 760 in London and eight regional branches.

As a government policy outline describes it, "the service may offer conciliation in industrial disputes in both the public and private sectors of industry where this is thought to be helpful."



B.C. DISPUTE
... the British have way

Acceptance of such offers is supposed to be voluntary. In most cases the services of ACAS are solicited. But problems can arise when the solicitation comes only from one side.

This, essentially, is what happened at Grunwick, where the Association of Professional, Executive, Clerical and Computer Staff sought recognition to represent employees after a strike had begun. Grunwick declined the services of ACAS and refused to assist the agency in polling employees about their desire to be represented by the union.

As a result, ACAS polled only those people whose names it got from the union. It then recommended that the union be recognized.

When ACAS won the first court test, brought by Grunwick challenging its findings, the court found that ACAS properly proceeded to "make such inquiries as it sees fit" — even though it got nowhere with Grunwick.

But the appeal court said this was no excuse and declared the ACAS inquiries had been inadequate, as only striking employees were polled, not those still working in defiance of pickets.

There it stands until October, at the earliest, when the House of Lords sits again.

Meanwhile a similar problem has arisen in Cleveland, where ACAS was unable to secure the co-operation of Commodore Business Machines UK Ltd., headed by Canadian Jack Tramiel, who now operates out of San Francisco.

Await Verdict

The result was a poll conducted in a rented hall near the plant where 141 people called in. Of these, 122 voted for representation by the Electrical, Electronic, Telecommunication-Plumbing Union. But the company later said there were 350 employees and refused to accept an ACAS report recommending recognition of the union.

The next move, delayed while the Grunwick case is still undecided, and likely to await the verdict of the House of Lords, is expected to be a union request for enforcement of the ACAS report.

That would be a long way down the road and no one yet knows if an ACAS report is enforceable. The procedure set out in the Employment Protection Act would end up at another body, called the Central Arbitration Committee whose finding might or might not be upheld in the courts.

ACAS would like to make just two points while all this is going on — and it may go on for some time yet.

The first is that it doesn't always find in favor of a trade union. In fact it recommended against a union for employees of the huge IBM Corporation. The second is that its work goes far beyond questions of union recognition and it is sensitive lest this work is undermined.

Sad Excuse

In the normal course of events, I am not given to writing letters to the editor; however, the situation in which I found myself on the morning of Saturday, July 30, cannot be allowed to pass, without comment.

Early that morning I boarded the B.C. ferry Queen of the Islands (bound for Pender Island) as a foot passenger. About five minutes prior to departure I noted that I had left my wallet in the terminal and after requesting advice from ferry personnel, and informing no less than four different employees of my situation, I was forced to run back to the terminal to identify and retrieve my wallet. I was informed that the captain of the Queen of the Islands would be notified of my departure and imminent return.

I was within 10 yards of the ferry ramp when that ferry pulled out, with all my baggage aboard, despite the fact that an employee (with a walkie-talkie phone) had informed the captain that I was in sight, and prepared to board momentarily. According to that employee, the captain's reply was to the effect that the ferry was already three minutes late and that he was not prepared to wait.

I lodged my complaint with the traffic controller who very coolly assumed responsibility and absolved himself in one and the same breath by stating that it was his duty to get the ferries out on time but that he was informed of my situation when it was too late to detain the ferry. According to the employee who was in possession of the walkie-talkie, this is not the case.

Now, regular passengers on the Pender Island run are well-aware that it is not unusual for that ferry to be upwards of two hours behind schedule. But even given that they were determined to remain on schedule, I find it absolutely incredible that with all those employees, (whose salaries are paid by B.C. residents), and all those gadgets and little golfcarts (which appear to be used for nothing more than their amusement) that not one of those employees made any effort to assist me in regaining possession of my wallet.

If this is the best service that B.C. Ferries can provide for taxpayers, then I shudder to think what kind of "special service" tourists are receiving, and it is no longer a source of wonder to me that Victoria's tourist industry is suffering a serious setback. Those of us who either live on the islands, or have family there, are forced to use this sad excuse for a ferry service. If I were a tourist, I couldn't be bothered. — Michelle Carr, Vancouver.

Euthanasia

Thanks to Stuart Underhill (August 3) for giving us the true facts in the Anglican committee's report on dying, thus allaying the fears that the retarded in society were in danger of elimination. Most assuredly the committee would not be referring to those who have a degree of mental retardation which puts them below their age group when they have been educated up to their full potential. Nor would they be referring to those who suffer a physical handicap but intellectually are on a par with their age group.

Society does not see the infants the committee was referring to, but most of us have heard of, even know of, infants born with incomplete brains or skulls, gross heart defects, massive brain damage at birth, or a condition where, due to fluid pressure, the head begins to enlarge, and if not arrested, may grow so large that it touches both sides of a crib. Many tragic defects occur, sometimes two or three defects in one infant, and with those who develop an intellect there is a measure of happiness for infant and parents, but is it morally justifiable to keep alive infants who can never develop an intellect? Has compassion become so distorted that we consider such infants more important than anguished parents who are daily reminded that the infant they produced will never become a conscious human being?

At the other end of the age scale are the elderly and the senile. Most senile people, if they could but be aware of what they have become, would be appalled, and would plead for a speedy death, but they live on, ending up as diapered, vacuous vegetables in a hospital bed, oblivious to their condition.

Not so lucky are those who retain their intellect, as did a fine courteous 85-year-old man I knew, who spent the last year of his life in hospital. At first he was peacefully ready for the death he thought was imminent, as the months passed by he began to plead for death, and at the end he bitterly renounced God and humanity. Do we have the right to impose our beliefs on others, the right to deny death to those who ask for it when they are ready for the life hereafter? I believe that at such a time, euthanasia would be an act of true compassion.

I would support a bill allowing euthanasia, a gentle, easy death, be given to those infants who will never develop an intellect. I would also vote for a bill for euthanasia by choice, so that I could assume responsibility for my own demise by signing a legal document claiming euthanasia if, by accident, disease or old age, I suffered gross brain damage or became senile, or so physically incapacitated that the quality of my life deteriorated to a point where death would be a blessed relief.

If we do not legalize euthanasia now, future generations will be forced to, because with a declining birthrate and an increasing lifespan, the proportion of elderly in our society will increase, placing an intolerable burden on those who work to support our economy. Is this the legacy we wish to leave our children and our children's children? — Ruby Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Nagasaki: It Can Never Again Be the Same

By JOHN SAAR
Washington Post

NAGASAKI, Japan — From the massive shipyards to the thousands of neat homes on the surrounding hillsides, this city's physical recovery from nuclear devastation 32 years ago Tuesday is an inspring triumph of human will.

In the physician's phrase, everything possible has been done. Yet a city is more than steel and streetcars, and the people of Nagasaki still suffer physical after-effects and various psychic ills.

Can a city whose centre flamed in living memory like the end of the world, whose people pass ground zero on their way to work and school ever again be fully normal?

The answer, gathered from two days of interviews with a broad spectrum of Nagasaki citizens is no, nor should it be.

The first and only plutonium bomb used against human beings killed approximately 75,000 people here on Aug. 9, 1945, and cast a lifelong shadow over the 75,000 survivors.

Soon to re-enter the city's A-bomb hospital, company official Yasuo Ishida, 55, said: "We have suffered so much. The only reason to survive is to make sure we are the last people in the world to be A-bombed."

Since the sky exploded over this historic port-city in western Japan, a nuclear hush has settled over the world. Proud of their city's rebirth from ashes and radiated rubble, citizens here are determined that nuclear peace should prevail and deeply fearful that it won't.

Taxi driver Yukio Jima was 6 years old when he went to an aid station with his father the day after: "I only could stay 10 minutes. I saw so many burned people. They died very quickly. It was terrible to see — those are sights I can never forget."

A pragmatic working man unconcerned with the pacifist organizations that flourish here, he is pessimistic: "The world hasn't learned the lesson. I think there will be a nuclear war in the future, and maybe Nagasaki will be destroyed again."

At 11:02 Tuesday the city fell silent for a commemorative minute. Ships' sirens wailing in the distant harbor and church bells from different quarters of the city blended in mournful harmony. Looking up from the Peace Park that lies at the explosion's epicentre, blue skies could be glimpsed through fleecy clouds. Looking down, 32 years ago, B29 bombardier Kermit Beahan glimpsed the Mitsubishi Company's Nagasaki arms factory and released the 10,000-pound, plutonium-cored bomb nicknamed "fat man" for its bulbous profile. At 1,500 feet the bomb exploded with the force of 20,000 tons of TNT — diminutive by modern weapon standards, but sufficient to char every man, woman and child living within a radius of 1,000 yards.

The hilly topography saved many lives, and because Nagasaki was the second city to die in a nuclear holocaust, it has never received the international attention lavished on Hiroshima, which was bombed three days earlier. Tired of being treated as a kind of second fiddle, the Nagasaki citizens are becoming more asserfive in their demands that the world listen: "We are angrier now because people ignore us," one survivor explained, "and the world is on the edge of nuclear survival."

A Beautiful, International City

In targeting Nagasaki, American strategists were eyeing its role as a major port and weapons manufacturing centre. Ironically, it was one of Japan's most beautiful and, after Tokyo, most international cities. As the traditional gateway for trading with the West for more than 400 years, it remained accessible to foreign countries even during the 200 years of Japan's self-enforced isolation.

When the Japanese refused the July, 1945, Potsdam declaration ordering their immediate surrender, President Harry Truman gave the go-ahead for the atom-bombing of Hiroshima. The alternative, invasion of the four main islands of Japan, would cost one million American casualties, it was estimated.

Hawks and doves among the Tokyo war leaders were locked in violent disagreement over whether to surrender. Truman's warning of "a rain of ruin the likes of which has never been seen on this earth," was ignored. Warning leaflets were dropped on Nagasaki, then the bomb.

Increasingly this background to the attack is being forgotten, and Nagasaki citizens see themselves as victims of a war atrocity. With his teachers' approval, 11-year-old Matsuo Kazuki told classmates Tuesday: "There was a loud noise and light and many people were dead. Why did innocent people have to be killed by atomic bomb?"

A report by 40 medical experts submitted to an international symposium on atomic weapons here Monday even suggests the plutonium weapon was dropped for the experimental purpose of comparing its function with the uranium bomb used at Hiroshima. Barbara Reynolds, a Quaker pacifist who is the organizing secretary of a peace resource centre at Wilmington College, supports the allegation: "There's no doubt the second atomic bomb was definitely experimental — to compare effects, and I think that's why we didn't like to look at Nagasaki too much."

Though the United States has not been attacked by name at the official commemorations, Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe of Sri Lanka, the current president of the United Nations General Assembly, came close Tuesday. He called the nuclear attack a "horrifying experiment . . . an unqualified success for science (which) was an inmitigated disaster for humanity."

Amerasinghe also voiced a popular feeling in Nagasaki when he referred to the neutron bomb as "the most recent abomination." University sophomore Kyoko Sueyoshi, 18, for example, told visitors: "People in Nagasaki have special knowledge of these things . . . I think it's very bad President Carter is going more ahead with the neutron bomb."

The Nagasaki explosion is documented with harrowing detail in three floors of the city's Atomic Museum. The tone is accusatory, designed to shock, and only conscience prods the visitors round the exhibits. A helmet with portions of skull visible, partly melted watch stopped at 11:02, a grisly still-life incorporating the bones of a human hand in a mass of bottles melted by the immense heat — searing reminders that Nagasaki has already lived the world's nightmare in real-life.

The open windows show the city restored and prosperous; photographs alongside hark back to the sea of fire and the despair of the people. Outside the crickets are chanting. Commemorated death reigns inside. A European woman pales and steps out on to the balcony. The hot, limpid breezes from the sea never dispel the chill. It confounds physiology, the body heats and raises goosebumps simultaneously.

The dead and the dying are passing into history, yet the pain and outrage of their experience lives on in the atomic art and photographs now appearing in Nagasaki. The vivid, Auschwitzian scenes of pure horror are vivid even when painted by rank amateurs. The disfigurements inflicted on the victims are unsparingly recorded in photographs that assault the senses.

The hills, which were blackened, naked and smouldering after the explosion, are again clothed in dense foliage. Similarly the 75,000 survivors have melted into the city's 460,000 population and scars and injuries generally go unnoticed. All are registered as atomic bomb victims, and their health is checked annually and entered in a yellow identification card. Last year 93 people died from illnesses possibly related to the bomb, and 2,500 were admitted to the A-bomb hospital for treatment.

The survivors share a common fear — that the radiation dosage they received 32 years ago will cause cancer or leukemia.

'I Have Tremendous Anxiety'

Monday night, in a scene repeated all over the city, cook Tomizo Ishida welcomed his elder brother, Yausuo Ishida, who had returned to Nagasaki for the atom bomb anniversary. Both men were irradiated in the blast, and Yasuo's wife divorced him after doctor relatives warned he was suffering from atomic bomb disease and would die. Torrential rain beat down on the roof as the two brothers shared a bottle of brandy on the mat floor.

They talked of the sights and sounds and experiences of a terrible day. Only people who were there can understand, they both said. Tomizo's apprentices at the restaurant accuse him of exaggerating when he tries to tell them what it was like.

Yasuo lives in fear now for a good turn performed 32 years ago. Immediately after the blast he went to look for a neighbor's body and absorbed a near fatal dose of radiation. He lost all his hair and lay near death for three months. The sickness retursn in one form or other several times each year: "I have tremendous anxiety," he said. "I don't know how, or what kind of illness I might get."

Good Luck, Consumers. You'll Need it With the Liberals

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

Canadians are sustained largely by their smug superiortiy complex toward the vulgar Americans. As an example, there is a delightful myth in this country that the lobbyist — the florid, Panetella-shrouded cartoon figure — exists only in the well-oiled corridors of Washington and is a foreign animal in pristine Ottawa. It is one of the loveliest delusions of our time.

One of the best samples of the under-estimated power of the lobbyists is the intriguing story of how the business community in Canada killed the Competition Act that was introduced in 1971 in an attempt to impose some antitrust muscle on a codntry that in effect has none. The business lobby succeeded in having Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford sacked and the principal mandarins in his portfolio moved. Much reduced corporate contributions to Liberal campaign funds helped dump the Liberals to a minority position in the 1972 election and the Consumer post has since been given a low priority by the Liberals, with a constant turnover in ministers. It is now headed by a man who previously was one of the chief lobbyists fighting the ministry.

A detailed account of the success of the lobbyists is laid out in a new little book by W. T. Stanbury, an academic who specializes in the consumer and antitrust field. It is called Business Interests And The Reform Of Canadian Competition Policy 1971-75 (Carswell Methuen) and is a devastating indictment of how the Liberals bow to business pressures while ignoring consumers. (Owners of pigs may be better represented in Canada than consumers. The Directory of Associations in Canada lists 14 associations under "Consumer Protection" — 38 associations under "Swine.")

Canadian businessmen don't really believe in competition. They do in the United States. But not here. A country built on the monopoly clause given the CPR and monopoly charter King James gave the Hudson's Bay Company has grown accustomed to collusion. As Stanbury says, "There does not exist in Canada any fundamental belief in the virtues of competiton as the method of allocating scarce resources and of diffusing economic and political power." Canadians, being docile types, tend to be trusting of public power. (Americans are not.) To quote Northrop Frye, "The idea of a chain of command was built into this country from the beginning, the respect for authority.

Ah, the respect for authority. This is what it has done for obedient Canadians. Two years ago a group of academics let loose by the federal government determined that Canada has the weakest anti-combines legislation of any so-called civilized country. When the original legislation was introduced in 1889, large lobbies of manufacturers from Toronto and Montreal descended on Ottawa with a great array of lawyers and defeated the bill. There has been a section of the Combines Investigation Act since 1923 making it an indictable offense to take part in a merger that has operated or is likely to operate to the detriment of the public. There has never been a conviction that was not reversed on appeal.

In 1925 there were only three permanent staff members administering the act. By 1941, the number had increased to only eight. Over 20 years the average fine per firm was a picayune $2,722 (the U.S. average under the Sherman Act was $51,204).

It was no surprise, therefore, that Canadian business reacted with such fury when new Consumer Minister Basford introduced in the Commons in June, 1971, Bill C-156, the Competition Act, that the London Sunday Times called "the most sweeping antitrust legislation in North American history."

As Stanbury points out, the business lobby in Ottawa has four characteristics: it is invisible, it is continuous, it is intense and its pressure is constantly shifting — from cabinet ministers to senior civil servants to the Senate to backbenchers. Basford was denounced as a "dangerous fanatic." At one stage, a lobbying group that demanded rewriting of the Competition Act represented 13 firms with combined revenues of $7.8 billion. The ferocity of the business attack on Ottawa of course had its desired effect: Basford was dropped as consumer minister in early 1972. He was replaced by Robert Andras, an auto dealer from the Lakehead who, applauded The Canadian Grocer, had "the entrepreneurial wisdom of a successful salesman." Mr. Andras, just incidentally, was also co-chairman of the 1972 election campaign, a man who knew that Liberal bagmen had run into stiff opposition because of Basford's bill. Mr. Andras announced that a revised bill would be reintroduced.

ABBOTT

BASFORD
... cut down

After the 1972 election, Herb Gray became the minister. By April of 1974 he had ready a bill to amend the Combines Investigation Act. The day he opened debate, the Liberal front benches were empty. An election was called the next month and he was dropped from the cabinet. Andre Ouellet succeeded him. By 1976, he had resigned after making his frustrated comments about the judge when an antitrust case against sugar companies failed. Bryce Mackasey then became minister.

Even more interesting has been the pillaging of the senior staff in the department. Once it was clear the Liberals were backing away from the orginal Competition Act, David Henry, the respected director of investigation and research, resigned to go to the Supreme Court of Ontario. When deputy minister Jim Grandy left shortly before Bill C-256 was allowed to die on the order paper, the writing was on the wall. In 10 years there have been seven different ministers and six deputies — not a record that would indicate Mr. Trudeau takes the consumer portfolio very seriously.

Today the newest minister is Tony Abbott, who has spent his entire life in an anti-consumer coloration and became minister only by last-minute panic when a cabinet shuffle was held up six hours by yet another impassioned Mackasey resignation. Abbott was an executive assistant to the late Robert Winters and then followed him to Brascan, where he was corporate counsel to that giant which held food and brewing interests. Next, Abbott was president of the Retail Council of Canada, a lobby for the big chain stores, and in one bitter speech at the time referred to "Comrade Ron" and "Commissar David" — meaning Basford and Henry. This is the man who is going to stickhandle the remnants of legislation on monopolies, mergers and combines. Goodluck, consumer.

STRAY FEATHERS

Some Strangers Make Appearance

If Victoria's birdwatchers looked a bit more harassed than usual last weekend, there was good reason — they had too much to choose from.

A call to the Victoria Natural History Society's new Rare Bird Alert, 382-0211 on your telephone dial, would have revealed the extent of the problem: not only was there a surfeit of rare and unusual birds around but said birds were scattered far and wide.

For example, a birder with a mind to cover all the "goodies" could have started at Cadboro Bay with Ron Satterfield's Marbled Godwit, moved to nearby Prevost Hill on Ten Mile Point for a Black-throated Blue Warbler, dropped-in (figuratively speaking, of course) at Clover Point for a serving of Franklin's Gull or Baird's Sandpiper, and finished up at Esquimalt Lagoon with a Ruddy Turnstone.

Or, going farther afield, there were those two great rarities at Iona Island in Vancouver — a Curlew Sandpiper and a Rufus-necked Sandpiper — the latter, if it proves to be what it purports to be, a first for British Columbia and possibly, Canada.

And, on that note, I finally get to my point — British Columbia's new bird checklist.

A couple of months ago I let it be known that British Columbia, thanks to Wayne Campbell and the British Columbia Provincial Museum in Victoria, would soon have its first checklist of the birds of the Province. Well, the checklist has now been released and can be obtained, for a quarter, from the Museum Gift Shop located near the main entrance of the Museum.

In my earlier comments about the checklist I tried to make the point that checklists in general, and ours in particular, often become obsolete before their ink is completely dry. Such seems about to happen. That Rufus-necked Sandpiper at Iona Island, if its identification is confirmed, and a Ruby-throated Hummingbird at Campbell River — this one confirmed with a color photograph — will raise the total number of species accredited to British Columbia from the 422 now on the list to 424. So Wayne you can start preparing for a new list.

But, while that's happening, let's take a fuller look at what we've got now.

First, the checklist is bound to become a welcome addition to any bona fide British Columbia birdwatcher's field paraphernalia, revealing as it does the status of every species known for the province and a few that are still uncertain. As such it will be a kind of ready-reference that can be used before going to the books for more complete details.

Of the species listed, all but 12 have been documented by specimens or photographs. These 12, shown on the list in parenthesis, offer an exciting challenge to any bird photographer to get out and get one of them on film — just for the record.

The checklist also reveals that 280 species of birds nest in British Columbia — or at least have been found nesting. There are still some curious gaps in this nesting record. One such is Anna's Hummingbird. Anna's Hummingbirds have become year-round residents of Victoria and are, even now, making quite a stir in Gordon Head. It's only a matter of time until this little newcomer from California becomes an official member of this province's landed gentry.

Extinct, introduced, and accidental species — those that have been seen in British Columbia five times or less in the past 100 years — are also included. There is, as well, a list of another 17 species which still must be considered hypothetical, birds for which there is no satisfactory evidence to support the record of their occurrence.

These vague and doubtful records present another challenge to birders to get out and get the evidence that will clear up all the doubts.

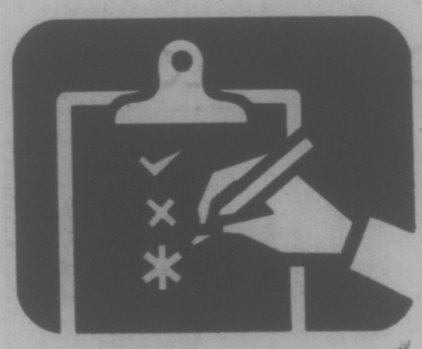
One of the most useful aspects of the new checklist, and one that may be overlooked at first, is the use of the new names recently assigned to several species by the American Ornithologists Union. These name changes may cause some early confusion but once it is known, for example, that what was formerly Traill's Flycatcher is now Willow Flycatcher, and that what was once our beloved Red-shafted Flicker is now lumped with the Yellow-shafted Flicker, and called, noncommittally, Northern Flicker, things should begin to straighten themselves out.

I have a complete list of these name changes put together by Wayne Campbell. You can get one for the price of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Just drop me a line in care of Stray Feathers at The Victoria Times.

As for those harassed bird finders, the new list will at least help them decide where their priorities lie. After all, it isn't every day you get a chance to see a new species for the country.



TECHNICAL

Prevents small problems from becoming big ones

Technical Analysis covers several Finning preventive maintenance programs designed to boost uptime and cut downtime for your Caterpillar equipment. Here's how one of these programs works. A qualified Finning specialist regularly inspects your machine. He makes a thorough check of the engine, transmission, hydraulics, cooling and electrical systems and makes adjustments. Then he prepares a report on the condition of the machine and recommends action necessary to prevent minor problems from becoming major repairs. Included in this program is Scheduled Oil Sampling (SOS) which locates, identifies and measures the amount of contaminants in used oil, and signals future internal failure in your Caterpillar equipment.

These low cost programs mean better production and greater profits for you. For more information on Technical Analysis and other money-saving CAT PLUS programs, call your Finning product support specialist.

Flin Flon Mine Marks Jubilee

FLIN FLON (CP) — Eyes that sweep the skyline of Flin Flon, Man., these days can't help but be attracted to the big "50" sign perched atop the bright red headframe of the mine of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd.

The sign, eight feet high and framed in lights for nighttime viewing, is a visible reminder — as if Flin Flonners needed one — that the company this year is celebrating its golden jubilee — 50 years in business in mining and coal.

Its principal mines, of course, are at Flin Flon and surrounding area where it began operations in 1930.

The company, however, was incorporated in 1927, the date it used to justify jubilee celebrations in 1977.

To help mark it, the company has done more than just put up a big sign in the community where it is the sustaining industry.

On July 1, for example, it staged a giant picnic where the menu included 5,000 pounds of hamburger, 1,000 gallons of coffee, and a ton of salad — all free to the estimated 7,000 that showed up.

In addition, it gave commemorative coins cast, naturally, in pure company copper, to everyone.

The company minted 15,000 of them for employees, suppliers, friends and others. None went to company directors.

So far, the jubilee has been marked by other, perhaps more practical achievements.

In June, the company began producing copper and zinc from its Centennial mine, 16 miles southeast of Flin Flon, where proven reserves to the 1,200 foot level are 1.6 million tons. It has eight producing mines in the Flin Flon area with combined reserves of 17.5 million tons.

It also announced plans to build a $26 million mill and concentrator at Stall Lake mine in the area.

Hudson Bay Diecasting Ltd., its wholly owned subsidiary, got $4.7 million to double its plating and buffing capacity at its plant near Toronto.

Early in the year Hudson Bay Mining got a new president — E. Peter Gush, whose youth — he's only 39 — belies a solid background as a finance specialist, and executive troubleshooter. He comes to the Toronto-based firm from South Africa where he was financial director for Anglo-American Corp., which indirectly controls Hudson Bay Mining.

So far, Gush has maintained a low profile while learning the Canadian operation.

His first real test may not be long in coming.

Analysts and shareholders are waiting to see what the company directors will do about investing the $144 million windfall gained in the controversial sale of its Sylvite potash mines in Saskatchewan to the provincial government.

The sale was completed April 22, strengthening the company's cash flow.

Gush has already indicated Hudson Bay Mining will use the cash to continue its investment in the resource sector, ostensibly oil, gas, coal and base metals. Coal would be a departure but an area where it has some expertise.

The company is unlikely, because it lacks competence in the area, to move into such resource sectors as hydro or pulp and paper.

"While our investment in the fertilizer business has been severely reduced as a result of the sale of our Sylvite division, this area nevertheless remains attractive, and one which provides scope for expansion," Gush said.

Because of its jubilee, the company was anxious to start 1977 on a strong note.

But at the annual meeting in April, it had to admit to a $274,000 loss in the first quarter to go with a deficit of $8.2 million for fiscal 1976. The blow was also hard felt because the company had ended 1975 with a profit.

One disgruntled shareholder at the annual meeting added to the discomfort by accusing the company of bad management of its affairs.

However, the gloom was cast away last month when the company was able to report a profit for the second quarter of $7.6 million.

Much of that profit came from Terra Chemicals International Inc., its fertilizer and chemical subsidiary in Sioux City, Iowa.

As a company, Hudson Bay Mining is not a giant although it ranks among the top 100 corporations in Canada. It is 43rd in assets 69th in net income and 79th in sales.

Prior to 1965, the company devoted itself entirely to base-metal mining in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Today, it is a diversified natural-resource conglomerate with interests in chemicals, fertilizers, crude oil and natural gas.

"On the eve of its 50th anniversary, the company is involved in a program of consolidation," Gush said.

Restraint Plea Fails To Get Wide Backing

OTTAWA (CP) — Government appeals to big business and labor for voluntary restraint in return for an early end to wage-and-price controls are likely to fall on stony ground according to comments from spokesmen from the two sectors.

The spokesmen feel that controls should be ended unconditionally and indicate that they have trouble accepting the government's call for both a voluntary monitoring agency after the program formally ends and a consultative forum which would include consumer, agriculture and other representatives as well as labor and business officials.

But despite their reservations, labor and business spokesmen are honoring a commitment made last week to Prime Minister Trudeau to take the conditions to their constituents for review.

The Canadian Labor Congress, which has acted as the voice of labor in meetings with government and business, is holding a special meeting of top-level officers of 114 affiliated unions Thursday in Ottawa.

And the Business Council on National Issues (BCNI), a group which includes the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and 140 major companies, has begun consultations with leading businessmen across the country.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business, which represents an estimated 42,000 small firms, is also polling the views of its directors.

But whether these groups can deliver any form of pledge to restraint remains to be seen.

Most of the major unions have throughout the program resisted any commitments in return for an end to controls. Although union leaders generally remain reluctant to speak about their stand until after next Thursday's meeting, some spokesmen say privately they think no concessions will be made.

Some, like vice-president Andre L'Hereux of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), and Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, have rejected the conditions.

McDermott says the government should drop controls on its own and not seek to turn labor and business into scapegoats L'Heureux said earlier this week the CNTU would not restrain wage demands after controls.

Ray Peer, chairman of the 100,000-member Associated Railway Unions, which is due to enter contract talks in October, wants controls off. He adds that union demands will be the same with or without controls.

"We will be serving a normal wage notice and bargaining with the railways as if there were no controls," says Peer.

A spokesman for the United Steelworkers said his union wants an end to controls without a monitoring agency, and would also like to see some stimulation of the economy to create jobs.

But he says it will be difficult for leaders to dictate to union locals the wage settlements they must agree to.

Businessmen recite similar difficulties. One Mantreal-based businessman said his contacts seemed to suggest most firms do not favor a monitoring agency and have some reservations about the consultative forum.

It will be a tricky proposition to get a pledge to restraint, he adds.

W. D. Archbold, president of BCNI, says it is unlikely there will ever be a uniform view on any subject from the business community.

"Business can commit themselves and try to persuade others to the same course but they can't deliver and speak for such a large sector of society with one voice," says Archbold.

Archbold also says the recent surge of inflation is not the responsibility of those business and labor representatives who have been meeting with government.

'WINDFALL' PROFITS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Windfall profits added millions of dollars to the cost of residential lots in the Winnipeg area in recent years, a provincial commission of inquiry has concluded.

The commission's report estimates that farmers, developers, builders and speculators realized about $60 million between 1972 and 1976 on Winnipeg-area farmland converted to building lots.

The report predicts similar gains between this year and 1981 will total about $200 million unless governments impose some kind of land speculation tax.

The findings are the work of Dr. Ruben C. Bellan, a University of Manitoba historian and economist appointed by the Manitoba government last year. Bellan concluded that the increase in land prices occurred mainly because of an increased demand for homes, partly the result of young adults born in the post-war "baby boom" reaching home-buying age.

MLAs Trade Insults Over School Aid Bill

Opposition and government members of the Legislature traded insults and points of order Friday as the Independent Schools Support Act made laborious progress through the House.

Only one section of the 15-section act to provide government support for private schools received committee approval during the three-hour sitting, leaving 10 sections to be considered. Four others were approved in the last few days.

The acrimony centred on a part of the section which states that a school would be financed if it were found by the inspector that it had no programs fostering racial or ethnic superiority, or religious intolerance or persecution.

Education Minister Pat McGeer said the regulation would apply only to programs taught in the schools, not to admission policies.

McGeer said if the legislation attempted to deal with admission policies, "it would lead to the erosion of the independent school system in the province.

He said that if it appeared private schools were being discriminatory in the admissions policies, the matter could be resolved under the Human Rights Code.

Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace said McGeer had placed himself in a "completely paradoxical situation" because through the section he had created the dilemma of encouraging one form of discrimination while outlawing another.

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) said, "this minister hasn't created a dilemma; this minister believes in discrimination."

"If your child is a girl, then she's not going to get into an exclusive boys' school, and I say shame on you," she told McGeer.

The debate then bogged down, with McGeer rising several times on points of order, saying the NDP was being repetitive, and with the NDP being cautioned by chairman Harvey Schroeder to stay with the subject at hand.

Opposition leader David Barrett then asked McGeer for a definition of what was meant by "fostering racial or ethnic superiority," saying a precise meaning was needed so the public could better understand the implications of the act.

McGeer said precise definitions were not necessary and that the inspector would make the interpretations, a move that would free him of government intervention.

Barrett called the statement an incredible shirking of responsibility on the part of McGeer.

"... to buffalo this house," he said.

"... bandoning a chi... a day after its birth.

McGeer said Barrett was obviously on the political downslide, and was so turned around in his logic that he had to twist his socks to put them on.

A NATURAL ALTERNATIVE

Apartments, condominiums and cookie-cutter style sub-divisions appear to be the order of the day. But for many people these accommodations just don't add up to the lifestyle they want for their families. Dean Park Estates offers a natural alternative. Three hundred and sixty-five acres of choice forested land. A view of the Gulf Islands in the sparkling blue Pacific, with Mount Baker for a backdrop. Beautiful John Dean Park beside the development offers three hundred and eighty acres where the whole family will enjoy the trails, the woods and the land. Just twelve miles from Victoria off the Pat Bay Highway, Dean Park Estates is only two miles from the airport or the shops in Sidney, and only four miles from Swartz Bay.

Conveniently located, beautifully situated where stately evergreens abound. An orderly and aesthetic development where all aspects will be carefully controlled to ensure the protection of your home and investment, Dean Park Estate provides "Greenbelt Living" at its best.

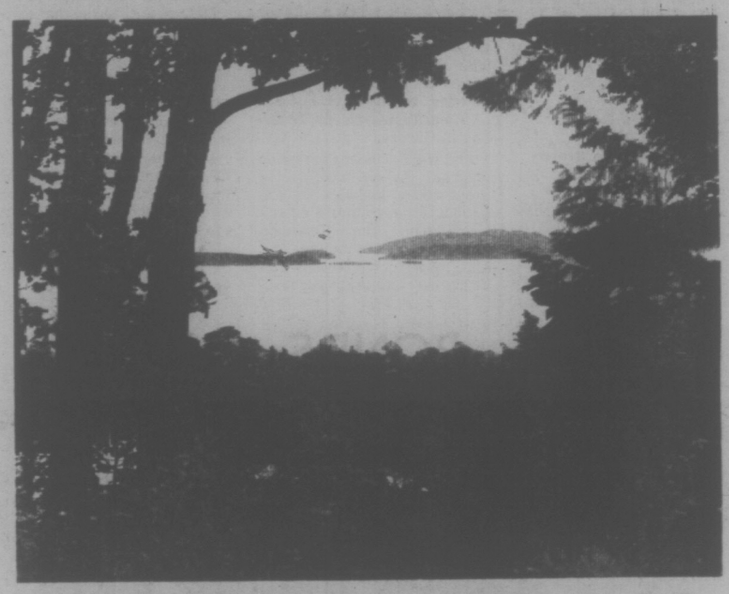
Come on up to Dean Park Estates, a twenty minute drive from Victoria through the rolling green farmlands of the Saanich Peninsula, via the Pat Bay Highway. Turn left on McTavish, then left on East Saanich Road, drive half a mile and look for the sign and stone gate on your right.



First there was the land.

In 1921, John Dean, a well known "fascinating eccentric" donated eighty acres of land which formed the basis of John Dean Park. This park, with its myriad trails and opportunity for the whole family to experience Vancouver Island in the wild, is a strong factor in favor of Dean Park Estates.

Barrett Montfort, known throughout Canada for his shrewd land investments and his ability to recognize prime real estate, became interested in Dean Park in the early 40's when there were plans afoot to log off the beautiful areas surrounding the original park.

Over the years, Mr. Montfort bought approximately five hundred acres of adjoining land, and donated about one hundred and seventy to increase the size of the park itself.

The concept evolves.

Not only is the concept of a fine development evolving at Dean Park Estates, but the house concept on each lot evolves as well

When you own one of the large lots on the development (each one is over a minimum one-third acre), it's up to you to choose the contractor—and the time you build.

And to ensure the protection of your investment, each house plan will go before an approving panel so that all houses in the growing community will complement each other. The removal of trees and other vegetation will be considered carefully, so that the concept of your new home at Dean Park Estates will indeed evolve in harmony with the land and the community.

The range of sites and settings at this unique residential development is unrivalled. There are many choice properties with striking views across the Strait of Georgia to the Gulf Islands and distant mainland mountains, or through splendid stands of timber to the checkerboard farmlands of the Saanich Peninsula.

The final stage in the evolution of a home in beautiful Dean Park Estates. First there was the land. Then the concept of your home evolves in close relation to the land and the community. And at last a new, beautiful reality emerges. The picture takes form.

At Dean Park Estates, we believe many families like you and yours will welcome this opportunity to get involved—to take an active role in the creation of your home.

At Dean Park Estates, we recognize that selecting the right home for you and your family may be one of the most important and carefully thought out decisions you will ever make. We think the experience should be more than selecting a ready-made structure in just another sub-division. We invite you to come watch your family grow in the growing community at Dean Park Estates.

Got a dream home in mind for you and your family? Come make the picture take form at Dean Park Estates.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 27-year-old woman who stole money from her former employer and wrote three bad cheques was sentenced Friday in Victoria provincial court to two months in jail.

Michele Elaine Baker, 3868 Shelbourne, pleaded guilty July 13 to theft over $200 and three counts of false pretences and was remanded until Friday for a pre-sentence report.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court the woman had taken a total of $3,146.21 from Charman Pacific Realty Ltd., 608 Broughton, where she worked as a secretary-bookkeeper. Law said the thefts occurred between April 1 and June 28 of this year. He said the money was taken from the vault or kept from customers who were not issued receipts.

Law also told the court that three cheques, amounting to $131.28, were returned to the bank marked not sufficient funds. She had opened an account with a small deposit on March 1, 1977, Law said, but had not deposited any funds in the account since.

Law added that 13 cheques had been returned to the bank up to April 29.

Defence lawyer James Main outlined some of the details of his client's life which were in the pre-sentence report and described them as tragic. He reminded Judge Fred Green that Mrs. Baker had gone through a divorce and a traumatic experience of giving up her two children to her former husband.

Main also submitted a letter from Eric Charman, president of the realty firm victimized by the theft, which stated that he would not like to see her sent to prison.

Law added that Charman's claim for loss was $3,146.21 but that some money was recovered from a flower pot in her home and a recovered cheque, and that the final figure outstanding was $1,534.60. He also said the money was spent on car rentals, liquor and "general high living."

Green, who called Charman's letter "gracious," denied Main's plea for a conditional discharge or suspended sentence, saying he had the protection of the public and the deterrence of the accused person to consider.

However, the judge acknowledged that there were unusual circumstances in this case, citing the marriage breakup and the giving up of the children.

But the judge pointed out that the woman's course of conduct was over a two-month period and said imprisonment is required.

He handed out a two-month term, to be served at Oakalla on the mainland, restitution of $1,534.60 to the realty firm, a year's probation and also ordered Mrs. Baker to take any counselling as directed by her probation officer after release. On the three false pretence convictions, Green handed out concurrent, 14-day terms but declined to order any restitution because of the small amounts.

David McAleer, 1514 Amphion, was charged with auto theft, possession of stolen property, dangerous driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

McAleer, at a bail hearing in which he was represented by legal-aid lawyer Barry Mah Ming, was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,200 without the need of sureties and was remanded until next Friday for election of his trial method.

Ex-BCAA Manager Sentenced for Theft

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Martin Benjamin Gauthier, 26, was sentenced Friday to 18 months in jail after being convicted of theft of $20,000 cash and $8,000 worth of airline tickets.

Gauthier, also known as McArthur Patton Gautier, stole the money and tickets from the local British Columbia Automobile Association office, where he was travel manager for a year until he disappeared in March.

He was arrested in Winnipeg in July.

Court was told that in the four month before Gauthier was arrested, he made more than 100 flights throughout Canada and the United States, sometimes making two and three flights a day. In June, there were only four days he did not fly.

Among cities Gauthier visited, court was told, were Miami, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Denver, Chicago, Seattle, Calgary, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Edmonton.

Three Police Teams Press Slayer Hunt

AGASSIZ (CP) — The investigation into the recent slayings of three and possibly four area teenagers has moved into the methodical stages with three two-man police teams in Agassiz and a similar number in Vancouver working full-time on the case, RCMP said Friday.

Sergeant Dave McLay of the Agassiz detachment said the assistance of police departments throughout North America has been requested. He said no arrests were imminent.

Ed Menger, 15, the only known survivor of the attack by a mystery gunman, described the man as being about six feet tall, slender to medium build with shoulder-length black hair and wearing a green-checked lumberman's shirt.

The five teenagers were sitting on the banks of the Fraser River near here on the evening of July 18 when the man surprised them, and began shooting with a rifle.

Menger escaped and notified police who later found the bodies of Evert Den Hertog and Bert Menger, both 19, and Jan Den Hertog, 16, in the river. They had been fatally shot.

QUITTING 'IN DROVES'

NEW YORK (CP) — English-speaking Canadian businessmen, like some of the corporations they work for, are quitting Quebec "in droves" as the provincial government "lowers a French-language curtain around the province," says Business Week magazine.

In its current issue the magazine says that the executives, particularly young English-speaking Canadians on the way up the corporate ladder, are leaving in record numbers to seek jobs in English Canada, the United States and other English-speaking countries.

"Although a shift to Toronto has been going on for years as Toronto surpassed Montreal as the financial capital of the country, the current political uncertainties in Quebec are greatly stepping up the exodus," the magazine says.

The provincial government's legislative plans to limit the use of English in business means that advancement opportunities for English-speaking Canadians would be reduced.

Business Week says the rise of separatist sentiment had turned a net immigration into Quebec of about 20,000 a year in the 1960s into a net emigration of 10,000 a year in th early 1970s. Some Toronto newspapers predicted a net emigration of more than 50,000 this year.

The exodus was occurring among corporations as well as executives.

"Many corporations are deciding to pull all or part of their operations out of Quebec. Since they want to continue to do some business in the province, most companies prefer not to discuss their moves."

Converted Oil Furnaces Risky

HALIFAX (CP) — Government energy conservation programs are increasing the risk of death by fire, Gilles Lemothe, retiring president of the Association of Canadian Fire Marshals and Fire Commissioners, said Friday.

"They're promoting the use of wood and coal and people are using add-on units on furnaces in order to save money," Lemothe, Quebec fire commissioner, said in an interview. "It's created a serious problem."

Henry K. Jenns, British Columbia fire commissioner, said converting oil-buring furnace to use wood or coal causes problems.

"They may create a lot of heat but there are no thermostats to control the heat," Jenns said.

The use of wood-burning stoves has been advocated in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island to ease the strain on other heating energy sources. Both provinces have removed the sales tax from wood stoves.

Jenns said most Canadians are no longer aware of the proper way to use wood stoves, thus raising the prospect of fire.

The 14 fire officials at the conference also expressed concern about use of some forms of home insulation.

"We're concerned about home insulation materials, especially in the basement, because people are using dozens of things which, unless properly installed, are deadly," Lemothe said.

The issue was one of 48 dealt with during the week-long conference of fire marshals and fire commissioners which ended Friday.

Among other matters were the need for mandatory installation of smoke detectors, hazards of certain types of cushion and mattress padding and transportation of dangerous materials.

Fire officials also are concerned about seeing the provinces strike a balance between fire safety and building security at commercial establishments, Lemothe said.

"As it is now they are in conflict," he said. "Locked exit doors . . . are OK for building security but they cost lives.

"What's needed are changes in the National Building Code that recognize the problem of security without impinging on safety."

Mandatory installation of smoke detectors in multi-family buildings, a decision taken by the Alberta government earlier this year, will be sought in all provinces, delegates decided.

Manitoba and British Columbia are studying the Alberta example, Jenns said. The problem in British Columbia is with old buildings, he said, as developers have readily agreed to put detectors in new buildings.

William D. MacKay, Alberta fire commissioner, said in a speech to the conference that 121 Albertans who died between 1971 and 1976 could have been saved had they had smoke detectors in their homes.

On the question of the danger of aluminum wiring, Jenns said neither he nor the association agrees with charges that it is a fire hazard.

"We're unable to support the charge that aluminum wiring is at fault in these fires," he said in an interview. "We've looked at it but we haven't decided yet."

That issue is under study by a special commisison of the Ontario government.

South Africa 'Scum of World'

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — South Africa heart surgeon Christiaan Barnard, frequently a defender of South Africa abroad, said Friday that his country has become the "scum" of the world community through its racial segregation policies.

The pioneer of heart transplants said South Africa made a mistake in 1948 — when the ruling National party first came to power — in attempting to "unscramble the egg" and effect political and social separation of the races.

"This was a critical period in the history of the human race," Barnard said. "It was just after World War II and the stench of the Nazi concentration camps was still fresh in our nostrils.

"Yet we come along and talk about the purity of the white South African. It is no wonder that we are called Nazis, that we are called Fascists, because this is the impression that we give the world."

Barnard was addressing a white lobby group called the South African Freedom Foundation.

Obront Sentence Reduced

MONTREAL (CP) — William (Obie) Obront, a Montreal meat magnate who refused to testify earlier this year before the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime, has won a two-year reduction of a four-year prison term for fraud and forgery.

The Court of Appeal also reduced to $10,000 a $75,000 fine given Obront last December after he pleaded guilty to one count of fraud and three related forgery counts.

Justice Yves Bernier, in notes accompanying a unanimous three-justice decision, noted Friday that Obront had no former convictions.

He also pointed out that tax authorities have taken steps to recover money owed by Obront, to the government.

Justice Bernier said the Court of Appeal had taken into account that there had been no "breach of trust" and that the frauds had not been carried out at the expense of ordinary citizens.

Plankton Backer Seeks UN Help

Kentaro, whose Tokyo business card bears the name Kentaro Plankton, is obsessed with the Antarctic continent and with the plankton called krill.

He says that the billions of krill are rich in a protein-hungry world and his concern is that they be harvested as a renewable resource, not mined by nations which have driven the baleen whales — which feed on the krill — to the edge of extinction.

Kentaro, as the driving force behind the Inanna project, was here seeking support for a petition the group will present to the UN General Assembly in September, seeking protection of the Antarctic plankton.

Kentaro knows first-hand the horrors of hunger.

His interpreter, when Kentaro was interviewed Thursday, put his experiences in these words:

"He had a very special experience. He was born in Manchuria. When the Second World War ended he was 10 years old and he and his family and other Japanese people living in the area were all caught and put into prison camps by the Russians.

"Then he and the others experienced great hunger. Some mothers killed their own babies so the babies could escape the hunger. Since then Kentaro has been looking for something that can be used as food for human beings forever."

TORY TO RUN

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Larry Lewin, Dawson Creek, announced Friday his intention to run for the leadership of the provincial Progressive Conservative party.

Dr. Scott Wallace has said he will retire as party leader in October.

Lewin, a University of British Columbia graduate, has practised law in Dawson Creek since 1960.

Youths Save Man, 81

He saved the life of an 81-year-old man stricken with a heart attack on a James Bay street Friday afternoon.

Matthews, 19, of 3201 Shelbourne, was driving in the 400-block Quebec with friend Kerry Wolson, 20, of 647 Michigan, when they noticed Eugene McLaughlin collapsed on the sidewalk near his home at 475 Quebec.

Matthews, a second-year education student at University of Victoria, ran to McLaughlin who had stopped breathing and using skills he learned at a Royal Lifesaving Society course four years ago applied artifiical respiration.

Wilson, a third-year biology student at UVic helped by keeping the man's legs raised and checking his pulse.

Matthews got the man's breathing going again before an ambulance arrived.

McLaughlin was admitted in critical condition but improved overnight and is today listed as fair.

A witness, Robert Jordison of 425 Quebec, who also took part in the rescue efforts, credited the youths with saving the man's life.

City Moped Promoter Gears for Sales Boom

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The lowly moped — scorned British Columbians — may be gaining respectability and Victoria dealers are hoping for a sales bonanza in the motorized pedal bicycles.

They say the breakthrough came recently when the provincial government decided a motorcycle driver's licence is no longer required for the gas-pinching machines — a regular driver's licence is sufficient.

Ted Zanker of Island Market International says his phone hasn't stopped ringing since the change was announced.

"So many people seem to be interested in mopeds all of a sudden," he says. "But I'm not set up yet to deal with the demand."

Zanker says he's probably done more than anybody to persuade the government to relax the moped licensing requirements.

He says he was the first person to import the bikes in 1973 and has been lobbying for changes since then.

Over the past four years he's set up 20 dealerships in B.C. but never got around to establishing his own retail outlet until now. He will open a speciality moped shop at 602 Esquimalt Road next month.

Mopeds (pronounced Mo-Peds) are popular in Eastern Canadian cities and in Europe, but haven't caught on in the west.

Local sales have been poor.

"About as slow as they can get," one dealer said.

Mopeds are still a fairly new idea in transportation, so new there is a lack of consensus as to how they should be classified.

In some parts of the world they are regarded as bicycles. Not so in B.C. Mopeds are motorcycles here.

That operators still have to wear helmets and the machines have to be licensed ($5 a year) and insured ($63) if the owner is under 25, $42 if over.

Until last week drivers also had to have a class 6 drivers licence. Now all they need is a normal class 5.

The motorized bicycle has been heralded as one answer to the energy crisis. It weighs less than 120 pounds, and its engine is 50 cubic centimeters or less. Top speed is 30. But it's biggest asset is its gas mileage — 200 miles per gallon!

So why then hasn't it become more popular here?

Bernie Simpson, manager of Mullins Marine, says the answer is anyone's guess. Maybe it's the weather, he suggests. Maybe, the cost.

A new moped retails for $399.

Or maybe it has been one other factor — which now no longer applies — the special licence requirement. Time will tell.

'Butcher Of Riga' Dead

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Interpol, the international police agency, has confirmed that the man who died here last week was alleged Nazi war criminal Eduard Roschmann, the newspaper ABC-Color reported today.

ABC-Color, Paraguay's largest newspaper, first reported Thursday that a man believed to be Roschmann had died in an Asuncion hospital.

Paraguayan police sent the dead man's fingerprints and photographs to West German officials to determine whether he was Roschmann. Doctors who conducted an autopsy said the man died of a heart attack and had suffered from diabetes.

Roschmann, known as the "Butcher of Riga," was wanted in West Germany for allegedly supervising the slaughter of 40,000 Jews and killing 50 of them himself as commander of a concentration camp near Riga, Latvia, from 1941 to 1943.

Roschmann was reported to have fled to Argentina in 1948 and lived in various South American countries.

S. Koreans Clash

TOKYO (UPI) — Police said today 10 persons were injured and 62 arrested in clashes between supporters and opponents of South Korean President Park Chug-Hee. Police said some 300 South Koreans believed to be affiliated with Mindan — the pro-Park Korean Residents Union in Japan — attacked the Igenohata Cultural Center where a conference of South Korean expatriates was being held.

Food Crisis Continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The world food crisis, which received widespread publicity in 1974, is still a problem and prospects for the future are not encouraging, according to a new study by the International Food Policy Research Institute.

"Despite major technological advances and vigorous effort by many governments, the quiet food crisis remains," the institute said.

"All the available evidence suggests that the number of people who have inadequate calorie intakes has not appreciably diminished despite considerable easing in the international grain markets, and the number will rise over the next decade unless there are significant changes in national and international food policies," the report said.

Suicide: Let Others Do It

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Public health physician Ragnar Toss wants to open a suicide clinic for the 2,000 Swedes who kill themselves each year — not to treat them but to help them do it. "Those who are tired of their lives ought to be allowed to decide themselves when to bring them to a close," Dr. Toss said Friday, likening the choice to women who decide to have abortions.

Writing in the Swedish Medical Journal, Toss said the elderly, the seriously ill and other suicide candidates should be able to die painlessly with the aid of special pills. "Their cases should be thoroughly examined by doctors and psychiatrists. Then the decision would be made — either they would be allowed help in dying or their applications would be refused — precisely the same way it was done before abortions became free."

WASHINGTON — Crippled and destitute, the widow of the only U.S. soldier executed for desertion since the Civil War implored reporters to "splash it all over; let the world know what kind of army we've got." Antoinette Slovik had just learned that Army Secretary Clifford Alexander had upheld the Second World War conviction and execution of her husband Pte. Eddie Slovik.

WASHINGTON — President Jimmy Carter's son Chip is moving to Plains, Ga., and may be splitting up with his wife Caron, White House sources said today. Mary Hoyt, Rosalynn Carter's press secretary, declined to confirm or deny reports that Chip and Caron, both 27, have been having marital troubles.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Actor Walter Pidgeon, 78, has been hospitalized for over a week with an ailment his doctors and family will not disclose. A spokesman for St. John's Hospital said Friday Pidgeon admitted himself to the hospital Aug. 4. Hospital officials refused to say why Pidgeon was hospitalized or what his condition was.

ADMIRED NAZI

YONKERS, N.Y. — "Son of Sam" lived in a ramshackle apartment with cryptic messages scrawled on the walls and newspaper clippings about the .44 calibre killings and mass-murderer Fred Cowan strewn about.

Pornographic literature covered the mattress of David Berkowitz who apparently had no other sex life.

"It (the Cowan story) was there lying on the floor next to one of the Son of Sam things (clippings)," said Washington Post reporter David Berliner, who was arrested Friday on criminal trespass charges along with three photographers who were caught by police inside Berkowitz' apartment.

Cowan, a Nazi admirer, killed six persons and wounded four others, then killed himself in a day-long siege and standoff in a warehouse in nearby New Rochelle, N.Y., last February 14.

Divorced Man Can Visit Cat

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — A Hutchinson woman has been granted permanent custody of a family cat by a Reno County judge, but her ex-husband was given visitation rights.

Monica Borders and Joseph Wells, who were divorced last year, had no children but both were fond of a cat named Bear. As a part of the personal property settlement, Wells was given custody of the three-year-old Calico Persian.

But documents filed with the court accused Wells of leaving the cat outside "unloved and defenceless" while it was in his custody.

Wells gave the cat away, but it kept returning home. So several months later, he gave the cat to his ex-wife.

Then last month Wells demanded the cat back. His wife refused and the couple went to small claims court. There, Judge Richard Rome ruled Thursday that the woman should have permanent custody since "I am reluctant to again disrupt Bear's feline blissfulness."

Rome said that since both at times had loved the cat and both have "her interest at heart," Wells should be given visitation rights.

Subway Simian

NEW YORK — Demonstrating rope skills that would make a cowboy envious, New York City Transit cops lassoed a 20-inch-tall monkey that was wandering through the city's mazelike subway system.

Officials said the monkey first was sighted Thursday afternoon on the tracks at 59th Street and Eighth Avenue but quickly disappeared into a tunnel.

It surfaced again Friday morning at the Times Square station where two transit patrolmen pulled hopes from an emergency locker and tossed them around the fugitive simian.

STAR TREKKER OPPOSED NAME

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The creator of the Star Trek television series says he was opposed to naming the space shuttle after his fictional space ship Enterprise.

"I was afraid the public would think it was a publicity stunt to promote the new movie or television series," writer Gene Roddenbery said Friday. "I would rather the real vessel have another more earthborn name.

Roddenberry's Enterprise was the futuristic space vessel that whisked Capt. James Kirk, Mr. Spock and other Star Trek characters about the universe and through several television seasons.

The space ship's namesake made its first solo flight and landing with two astronauts aboard on Friday.

Meshing Music Is Pride's Goal

TORONTO — Country singer Charlie Pride says he does not feel properly recognized.

"I feel hurt and left out, like I'm being punished for something," said the black country and western singer in an interview.

Pride, who will appear at the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand Aug. 30, has been named top male vocalist, won three Grammies for several of his 30 albums and makes frequent tours of Australia, Japan and Europe.

A former cotton picker who left home at 17 because he wanted to play baseball, Pride also is president of his own multi-million-dollar corporation in Dallas, Tex., where he lives with his wife of 20 years and their three children.

"I guess I'm traditional country. But, you know, we've got everything in music now from easy rock, hard and easy, hanky dank, flapdy jack, soft in, up and down and I don't know what. What disturbs me is that there's not enough meshing of them all.

After the Shock

max low

He picks his spot and sits and strums beside the lake that is so beautiful.

It doesn't matter that his guitar is battered nor that there's a couple of strings missing. To him it's a precious thing. To him, he's Elvis Presley. And he's happy.

Elvis — not even the young counsellors you talk to are sure of his real name — is a handicapped camper who comes from Seaview Rest Home in Powell River. And he's happy to be able to sit and sing by the lake; happy that a terrible tragedy didn't keep him from enjoying his one holiday of the summer.

In the tranquil waters of Cowichan Lake, only a few yards beyond the spot where Elvis sits and beyond the roped-off area where most of the 47 other mentally handicapped adults and children at the Lions' Easter Seal Camp frolic and cool off, seven campers were drowned just over two weeks ago when a boat capsized.

Shock paralysed the camp. The rest of the campers were sent home, their promised eight-day stay abruptly cut short. The 17 staff members and seven volunteers weren't sure what they were going to do. There was even the suggestion that the camp, which has been run by the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children for nine years and is enjoyed by 250 mentally and physically handicapped campers each year, may never reopen.

But it has reopened for the fifth of six summer camps — the final one starts Aug. 19 and there's an open house which the public is welcome to attend on Sunday, Aug. 21. And when I spent a warm (both in terms of heat from the sun and the welcome I got from campers and staff) afternoon up there this week, I found the handicapped people were delighted that it's going again.

And, though some still have the dark shadow of death in their eyes, the staff is delighted too.

"I was amazed at the way the morale in the camp recovered," Ken Bucci, camp director for the summer, told me. "I mean, I came down to the waterfront and looked out and thought: 'Can I come back here?' But as soon as the campers arrived it was bang, right back into it again."

"As for the way the camp functions now, it's great," the director added. "It's as though nothing happened. And yet, sometimes when you look into (staff) people's faces, you realize they are thinking about it. So people have been hurt . . . but it hasn't affected the way they work with the campers."

The hurt and sadness is one thing camp administrator Judy Nyquist didn't want to talk about. She preferred to praise the dedication of the young staff and volunteers, who put in a long day, getting up at 6:30 a.m. and running programs for the campers until 10 at night.

"And they're not doing this for the money, you know," Judy said. "They come to a place like this because they want to make a career in social work or caring for the handicapped.

"It's real youth power. Young people at work. They don't get enough credit for things like this; too many of them only make the headlines when they get into trouble."

She's right. And, when you look around and see how the staff and the young volunteers (whose ages range from 14 to 19) shower attention and affection on the handicapped, and when you see the camp's waterfront director Bruce Ross-Smith (he was driving the boat on that ill-fated day) helping them in the water, you realize what she means by dedication.

And rather than remember, Judy preferred to talk of the help and support of the community and the donations from groups like Kiwanis, Kinsmen, Rotary Clubs, and Legions as well as the Lions and from many individuals.

These donations, she said, when added to profits from the Telethon and Easter Seal campaigns, help give an eight-day holiday which costs around $250 per person per camp at an actual cost of only $48. And the handicapped campers only pay that much if they can afford it. If they can't, it's free.

After a tour of the pleasant dormitories and the restful lounge and dining room in the main lodge itself, I stopped to chat with some of the handicapped campers to ask how they enjoyed the programs arranged for them — the nature walks, the picnics, trips out to farms, the dances and talent shows in the evenings. And those able to express themselves were unanimous. They thought they were all "great."

"I enjoy everything about the camp — the craft-making, the talent show, everything," said Donna who comes from Powell River. "And I go in everything. I can't swim very well, but I still jump in!"

Lloyd, also from Powell River, told me this was his fourth holiday at the camp and he loves it.

"I can get away from the rest home for a while," he explained. "It's a break. You see all the beautiful scenery and it moves you. I write poetry down by the lake."

Judy Nyquist smiled.

"We have a tremendous number like Lloyd who return year after year for their holidays. They look forward to this all year. You see, there is nowhere else for these kids to go."

NYQUIST

BUCCI
. . . morale good

If the handicapped go anywhere outside for their holidays, they look different and people shy away from them, Judy explained.

"Here they feel at home and, instead of shying away, the young counsellors are close to them and good to them and they like it. This is why these camps are super.

"Now you see, Max, why we could not allow this camp to close; why we had to keep it going."

I did see. And as I left the beach area and walked up the path, I looked back over my shoulder and Elvis was still sitting there strumming quite unmelodiously and singing the words to a song that has never been written.

But he was happy . . .

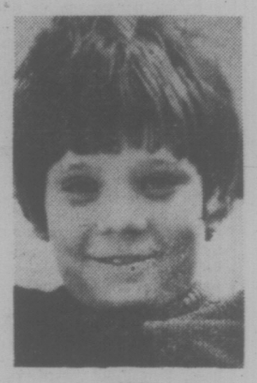
They Watched Their Son Live Again



JOHN

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Doctors appear to have won a touch-and-go fight to save the life of a 12-year-old Colorado boy critically injured in a 300-foot fall down a mountain on Salt Spring Island last week.

John Norman Ryan is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital — as satisfactory as a person can be who is recovering from two skull fractures, two broken elbows, a smashed right leg and knee, broken cheek bone and numerous cuts and bruises.

The boy's parents, Donald and Sonia Ryan, both medical doctors, said in an interview Friday their son's prognosis seems good. So good the family, including John and two brothers aged 15 and nine, is considering returning to their home near Denver next week.

The Ryans, who came to Victoria on July 24 on a two-week vacation to visit relatives, said the fact their son survived the fall is largely due to the speed he was rescued and transported to hospital, and the subsequent medical care.

"We've watched our boy brought back to life," said Mrs. Ryan. "It's like a miracle."

Doctors gave the boy only a slim chance of surviving when admitted Aug. 5, two hours after he fell down a steep slope on Mount Maxwell, a popular park and lookout near Ganges.

The boy lay in a coma for four days.

"It was a period of total despair for us," said Mrs. Ryan, a dermatologist.

Early Wednesday morning a nurse noticed the boy stirring and asked, not expecting an answer, "Are you hungry, John?"

"Not particularly, thank you," he replied.

It was the first coherent sentence he had uttered since being brought to hospital.

From that point on, said Ryan, there was never any doubt his son would recover.

Ryan, a neurologist, said his son shows no sign of internal or brain damage but the fractures will require months to heal.

The Ryans still don't know how the accident happened. John hasn't told them and they haven't asked.

The Ryan family and that of Mark Stuart of Victoria (Mrs. Ryan's brother) went to the lookout early in the afternoon.

Mrs. Ryan said they spent some time at the site admiring the view and having lunch. She took some pictures, one of her son dashing off with his cousin, Ross, also 12.

Minutes later Ross was calling out that John had vanished.

Ryan said he looked down the hill and saw a puff of dust.

"There was no sound, no cry: we couldn't see John so didn't know where he was. He just simply disappeared."

Ryan and Ross's older brother, Ian, 15, a member of a Victoria emergency search and rescue team gingerly descended the slope.

They found John unconscious 300 feet downhill crumpled into a rock slide at the end of a crevice and just inches away from a sheer 600-foot drop. Only some twigs and branches had kept him from rolling over.

Ian returned up the hill for help while Ryan stayed with his son, bracing himself against a large boulder, and nestled the boy's head in his left forearm. The danger of falling over the precipice made it impossible to apply any kind of first aid, he said.

Ganges volunteer firemen arrived soon after and within two hours the boy was whisked to hospital in Victoria by an Armed Forces helicopter.

"The rescuers did a great job," he said. "John had bled so much he was in a state of shock. If there had been a delay of another hour or two I don't think he would have made it."

Although the fall occurred in an area not fenced or railed, the Ryans don't blame the parks board who maintain the lookout.

"Anyone going up there can see it's a precipitous slope and should be wary," Ryan said.

They felt, however, there should be warning signs of the danger, maybe even plaques to record accidents that have occurred at the site.

Mrs. Ryan said she had shouted to John to stay away from the edge.

"He's not the usual middle child," said Mrs. Ryan who attended Victoria High School and won the Governor-General's gold medal in 1952 as top graduating student in the province.

"He's a straight A student, loves to ski and plays the clarinet. He's venturesome, too," she added.

Miracle Taken Off Critical List

Miracle, the courageous killer whale calf, continues to cling to life as the poolside drama at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel ends its third day.

Sealand manager Angus Matthews said today she has been taken off the critical list although she gave attendants a scare early this morning when she stopped swimming and appeared to sink.

But the attending medical experts believe that was just a normal pattern and she had simply stopped to rest. Previously she sank to the bottom and would have drowned if not raised by her handlers and floated on a styrofoam pad.

Although off the critical list, her condition is still serious, Matthews said.

"There are a lot of notches between being a healthy animal and being taken off the critical list," he said.

But the fact she is alive at all continues to amaze her guardians.

Wounded by gunfire and a boat's propeller, she languished for about a week in Menzies Bay near Campbell River covered with algae and rife with infection and parasites.

She was transported to Oak Bay Thursday, and her survival fight earned her the name Miracle.

A blood test today showed a slight increase in the white cell count, confirming that infection is still there, but that was to be expected, Matthews said.

If she survives her ordeal, her chances of being released in the next couple of years are slim, Matthews said.

She will have to be raised in captivity because of her early feeding patterns. The calf has been hand-fed more than a week.

Matthews said Sealand is committed to seeing her through survival and subsequent care.

When residents of Menzies Bay began feeding her fish, it was the first reported case where a free killer whale has been fed by man.

Jay Hyman, a consultant in marine animal medicine in New York became involved with Miracle's plight while here on vacation.

He was part of the crew that brought her from Menzies Bay and while there observed her feeding.

"I'm glad I have photographs of it because my colleagues in New York will not believe me otherwise."

Reporter Nicholson loses again

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Othello, in the classic Shakespearean tragedy, is driven to madness by the wicked Iago who constantly misleads, confuses, torments and generally makes life hell for him.

The new Othello is a game of strategy marrying chess, checkers and backgammon, that perhaps would have been more aptly named Iago for the confusion and torment it can cause.

Noreen Hoita, the Japanese-Canadian promoter of the game Othello, came perilously close to suffering the same fate Friday.

The 20-year-old representative of the Toronto firm which is distributing the Japanese-invented game in Canada, issued a challenge to this reporter, and generally misled, confused and tormented him before scuttling him to utter defeat in front of his colleagues in the Times newsroom.

Wearing a traditional Japanese kimono, Miss Hoita began a cross-Canada tour in Victoria Friday and today giving demonstrations of the game in Hillside and Mayfair Malls.

The game was developed in 1971 by Goro Hasegawa, a Japanese pharmaceutical company worker who named the game Othello, because his father, a Shakespearean scholar, thought it a game of dramatic reversals.

The game is deceptively simple. It takes about half a minute to learn, and it's easy to believe the promotion literature that claims it takes a lifetime to master.

Othello is easier to learn than chess, more complex than checkers and less dependent on chance than backgammon. It's a board game for two played with black and white discs on a field of 64 squares.

The object is to outflank your opponent's discs and end up with a majority of discs on the board in your color.

In Japan, five million sets have been sold, and at the last national tournament, 20,000 players entered.

More than 25 other countries are distributing the game. In Canada, distributor Irwin Toys says the game has become its largest seller in terms of advance sales.

Miss Hoita's enthusiasm when talking about the game belies the customary Japanese reserve redolent in her traditional kimono.

But it's no wonder — the costume is for promotion only. The University of Toronto student is a fourth generation Canadian. (Her grandparents are from Victoria.)

The promotion began as a summer job for Miss Hoita, but already she has plans to take the game to Canadian universities on weekends once classes at U of T start again.

She said her mother told her she would get bored with playing all the time, but she says there's no way that will happen. She says she is addicted to the game.

The game has become the latest U.S. college craze and recently Caltech Institute on the west coast challenged Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the east coast to a game by telephone.

Plans are already afoot for a Canadian national Othello tournament with the winner receiving an all-expenses trip to the proposed world championships.

Included with each set (about $13 which seems expensive considering its simplicity) is a coupon inviting the owner to become a member of the Canadian Othello Federation.

Miss Hoita said she hopes reigning Japanese champion, Fumior Fujita, a 27-year-old barber, will come to the Canadian championship.

Must Change, Says Jim

ANCASTER, Ont. (CP) — Jim Nelford went into today's final round of the Canadian amateur golf championship knowing he'd have to change his thinking if he hoped to hold the lead.

The quiet, confident all-American at Brigham Young University saw his once-solid seven-stroke lead dwindle to four Friday after an erratic round.

"You start thinking a little defensively out there," said the 22-year-old from Burnaby, B.C., who has geared his future in the golf game for the pro ranks. "I was just trying to not make too many mistakes. . . .

"I wasn't making the putts today. . . . I missed about four or five that were under 10 feet. . . . That was the difference. Yesterday they were going in."

He fired a competitive course record 64 Thursday that hadn't been equalled at Hamilton Golf tnd Country Club's 6,750-yard, par-70 layout since Tommy Armour did it in the 1930 Canadian Open.

Rod Spittle, the Niagara Falls, Ont., business major at Ohio State where he is captain of the golf team, had the best chance to overtake Nelford but faltered at the turn.

He was within two of the leader after trailing by seven, but blew his chances when he went double-bogey on the 10th and had another double-bogey on the 18th.

"That 18th has not been kind to too many people today," said Spittle of the 18th where so many of the surviving field of 70 and ties after the first two rounds came to grief.

His round included five birdies, one bogey and the two double bogeys that left him with an even-par 70 and still four strokes behind the leader. Nelford had a four-under total of 206 and Spittle was at 210.

Rafael Alarcon, the 19-year-old Mexican champion who lost in sudden death to Nelford in last year's championship in Victoria, had the day's best round—a 68—and shared third place with two-time champion Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver. Roxburgh had a 70.

Doug Lecuyer of Edmonton and Graham MacIntyre of Halifax held fifth place at 215, nine strokes behind the leader. Lecuyer shot a 69—the only other player to break par Friday— and MacIntyre a 71.

At 216 were Graham Cooke of Dorion, Que., and two United States amateurs, Jim Keim of Erie, Pa., and Bob Mase of East Lansing, Mich. Cooke posted a 71, Mase a 73 and Keim a 75.

Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., the 1961 champion, was in a group of 217 with 1971 titleholder Dick Siderowf of Purchase, N.Y. Cowan had a 70, Siderowf a 71.

Four-time champion Nick Weslock, 59, of Burlington, Ont., shared 218 with 1960 king Keith Alexander of Edmonton. Weslock had a 75, Alexander a 70.

WHA Got Sharp Stick In Dealings With NHL

It does sort of seem that the World Hockey Association got the short end of the stick in its bid to become a part of the National Hockey League. To put it bluntly, the WHA was led up the garden path.

"We were used," said Nelson Skalbania of the Edmonton Oilers. "We've got one foot in the grave," said Marc Tardiff of Quebec Nordiques. And it appears, too, that general manager Sam Pollock of the Montreal Canadiens was bitterly disappointed that the issue was handled the way it was.

"This was a very important decision," he commented wryly, and nowhere in his statement was there a hint of approval for the NHL action. The WHA was used all right, the NHL brass taking a good look at all they wanted to see (and know) and then saying, sorry, we don't need you. The thought here is that it would have been better for all concerned to join together even if for the first year the action was on the old format. The final merger could have come later.

Then, there was the final event of this year's B.C. Salmon Derby, held over four weekends, with the handicap champion from Delta, Karl Emde the big winner. Emde's fish weighed 37 pounds, eight ounces and handicapped (plus 10) to 47:8, beating out the catch of red-headed Clay Corner of Victoria who actually landed the biggest fish, a 43-pound, eight-ounce lunker from the Trap Shack at Beechey Head. And that trip was quite a story, too.

That was back in the second Derby weekend and fishing with Corner were Brad Hasanen and Dave Lobb, who happened to own the boat. Corner only got the one fish, his 43.8-pounder; Hasanen got five, the biggest 27, and Lobb two, the biggest 25. Not bad for one boat.

Hasanen went on to get another at Cowichan, 25:8, and take the Cowichan area prize when Clive Ramkeesoom moved into the championship bracket with his 25:8 catch. Corner ended up with an $8,000 Datsun and Okanagan trailer, and Ramkeesoom a trip for two via CP Air to Australia.

Then there was Victoria's Ken Moyes. Under the old rules, Moyes, who caught a 41:10 pounder at Beechey, but had to settle for an area prize, would have been second overall. And those are just some of the reasons that Island anglers felt they were being discriminated against with the advent of a handicap system.

Emde, of course, got the $25,000.

Oh, yes, and if Moyes was happy with his 41:10 catch, it wasn't his biggest ever, and thereby hangs a fish tale.

In 1967, while casting in the Kitimat River with a 16-ounce spoon, Moyes hooked into a 65-pounder. He had a nine-foot rod and a light leader, fought the fish for two hours, and, not having a net, literally had to jump on the fish and ride it into submission.

Meanwhile, on the water at Cowichan in the derby's third week, guess who was catching most of the family fish? Ken's wife Penny landed two at 19:4 and one at 17:10. A nice haul but no big winner, unfortunately . . . But then, you can't win if you don't compete, can you?

And I suppose it's no secret to those in the know, but the average lacrosse fan probably doesn't realize that Vancouver Burrards have a secret weapon this season. It's the mid-game brawl. Burrards haven't lost a game this year when they've had a multi-player fight and it's patently obvious they use this ruse to get an advantage of their opponents.

Most teams, you see, can play the Burrards fairly even at full strength, but not when it gets to be three-on-three and four-on-four. That's where Burrards shine, with such players as Dave Tasker, Ron Pinder and Doug Hayes, to name a few. The first two are quick enough to beat one man and are good shots while the latter is big enough to beat anyone at any given time. All of which makes one-on-one right up the Burrards' alley.

Last Tuesday, Salmonbellies had the edge on Burrards and according to coach Bob Salt of Coquitlam Adanacs, who saw the game, "were doing everything right."

Then came the second period bust-up, player evictions, short-handed situations and Burrards took over. The Salmonbellies were dead.

And that's why Ward Sanderson has been in the Burrard lineup. To stir up the other team, and no other good reason.

His most recent outburst may prevent Sanderson from doing much more stirring in the current playoffs. Commissioner Roy Burton has handed the Burrard bruiser a five-game suspension and hit New Westminster's Al Lewthwaite with a three-game ban.

Burton explained that Sanderson received the heavier penalty because he had been suspended for three games earlier in the season. Thus the commissioner may be getting tougher, using some of the power that could be an answer to unnecessary violence.

It will be wise to use it, before somebody gets more seriously hurt.

Fun for Parents

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. — Betsy King, fresh out of LPGA qualifying school, gave a gallery which included her mother and father a thrill on the eve of her 22nd birthday with a five-under-par 67 Friday, taking a one-stroke lead over Mary Mills after two rounds of the $100,000 Long Island Charity Classic.

None of the 5,500 spectators besides Dr. and Mrs. King, from Limekiln, Pa., bothered to follow the recent graduate of Furman University, who was named the school's woman scholar-athlete of the year, but King's two-round total of 138, six under par, was good enough to hold off first round leader Mills' 68-71—139.

Canadians Dale Shaw of Victoria and Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., each followed opening 81s with 76s for 157s but it took 150 or better to qualify for the final two rounds.

Littler Eight Under Without One Bogey

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Veteran Gene Littler, one of golf's quiet men at age 47, may like to dabble in antique cars, but that doesn't necessarily mean he can't show the youngsters in the 59th Professional Golfers' Association championship a new twist or two.

Littler, winner at Houston in May, has been off the tour for six weeks because of a bad back. In fact, he didn't play any golf for 4½ weeks until he started hitting again a week ago.

Nevertheless, the 1961 United States Open champion, drove his 1954 Bentley Continental— one of seven special cars he owns—the 500 miles to Pebble Beach from his home in La Jolla, Calif.

He has carded rounds of 67 and 69 for an eight-under-par total of 136 and a two-stroke lead going into today's third round.

"I didn't come up here with the idea of tearing Pebble apart, but I thought I could play well," he said, adding that it was the first time he could remember that he hadn't had a bogey during the first two rounds at this oceanside course on the Monterey Peninsula.

"For two days, I don't see how the course could be easier," said Littler, winner of the 1975 Bing Crosby pro-am which uses Pebble Beach as one of its three courses.

"So, an eight under total won't win but I'm not unhappy with it. At this point, a 10 or 11 under will win it. I don't see how it can play any easier."

Littler led by two strokes over Jerry McGee, a winner in Philadelphia two weeks ago, on the 6,806-yard, par-72 course which saw its first sunshine Friday after being encased in fog and mist most of the week.

Two more strokes back at 140 were Jack Nicklaus, seeking his first victory in a major tournament this year but with five career victories at Pebble Beach, and Lenny Wadkins.

Ferguson Two Back

CALGARY (CP) — Erin Ray Fostey of Orillia, Ont. carded a four-under-par 67 Friday for a one-stroke lead following the first round of the $15,000 Alberta Open Golf Tournament.

The 22-year-old protege of Al Balding at the National Golf Club in Woodbridge, Ont., had an early tee-off and had to fight rainy weather as he carved two strokes from par on both the front and back nines of the tight, 6,458-yard Willow Park course.

Five players, including home-course amateur Ken Wasslen and host-pro Lorne Rowe, shot four-under 68s. The others were defending champion Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., who was won three tournaments at Willow Park, including two CPGA titles, Dave Barr of Kelowna and Don Graham of Medicine Hat.

Cec Ferguson of Victoria shot 69 and Victorians Bob Beauchemin and John Morgan were tied at 73 with Bill Wakeham of Cowichan.

Fostey, who said he used his driver only three times because of the narrowness of the course, included a near whiff in his total. He touched the ball while taking a practice swing on the 11th hole.

A former junior hockey player with Ottawa 67s of the OHA, Fostey has played the Canadian tour for two seasons. He and Beauchemin are two of seven playing pros operating out of the National Club.

CRICKET IN KITCHEN, PENNY ON FIRST TEE

CINCINNATI (AP) — "I've heard Beth Daniel, Beth Daniel, Beth Daniel all week," said Canadian rookie Cathy Sherk. "I presume she'd be the favorite."

Sherk, a record 9-and-8 semi-final victor over Brenda Goldsmith, smiled and said, "I'd like to meet her since she is supposed to win it."

All her good luck charms say Sherk might become the eighth in history to win the National Women's Amateur golf crown in her first try. Daniel, a 3-and-2 semi-final winner over Nancy Hager Hammer, was the seventh to achieve the feat two years ago.

"I'm superstitious," said the 27-year-old pro shop worker from Fonthill, Ont., "and I found a cricket in the kitchen last week. My mother says that is good luck.

"Rick, my husband, found a penny on the first tee here the other day. And I found a feather on the course today," she said.

The 36-hole championship match over Cincinnati Country Club should have seemed like a driving contest. The finalists outdrove their Friday opponents by as much as 30 yards.

Stacey Breezes To Junior Crown

MANOTICK, Ont. (CP) — Stacey West of Thornhill, Ont., won her second consecutive national junior women's golf championship Friday by the same 12-stroke margin of victory as her 1976 win in Regina.

West shot a three-over-par 75 for a three-round total of 225, leaving the field of 95 competitors well behind.

Karen Mundinger of Toronto won a sudden-death playoff for second place on the first hole against Michele Guilbault of Montreal after both golfers finished with a 54-hole total of 237.

Louise Tremblay finished fourth with 238 followed by Terri Bulger of Cobourg, Ont., at 239.

West was playing in her last junior competition because she turns 19 in three weeks and will no longer be eligible to compete as a junior.

She started the day eight strokes up on the pack and breezed to an easy victory.

Guilbault took six strokes on the par three, 10th hole and Mundinger took seven.

Deprived of Soccer, Williams Finds Gold

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Track and field was only second choice for Desai Williams, 18-year-old Toronto student, but you'd never guess from the way he has performed at the Canada Summer Games.

Williams, who gave up his first love, soccer, because his high school in the Toronto suburb of Scarborough abandoned its program in that sport, completed the sprint double with a victory in the 200 metres Friday.

Then within hours he came back to anchor the Ontario team to a gold medal in the 4x100-metre relay, making Williams the first athlete to win three golds at the 1977 Games.

Williams also became the first sprinter to win both the 100 and 200 metres since the Games were inaugurated in Halifax in 1969 although Tony Powell of Dundas, Ont., pulled off a different double—winning both the 200 and 400 in 1969.

Despite the 200-metre and 4x100 wins and two other golds, in the women's 4x400-metre relay and the men's shot put, Ontario lost a little ground to British Columbia in its bid to retain the track and field title it won in Burnaby, B.C., in 1973.

With 12 events to wind up the track and field program today, Ontario has 330.5 points. B.C., which finished second to Ontario in this sport four years ago, has 301 followed by Quebec with 245.5, Alberta 218.25, Saskatchewan 123.75, Manitoba 105.25 Nova Scotia 56.25, Newfoundland 40.5, New Brunswick 21.5, Prince Edward Island 10.5, Northwest Territories 2 and the Yukon 1.5.

Ontario won six gold medals Friday—two in water skiing and four in track and field—to increase its Games-leading total to 16. Quebec, which won two golds in water skiing and one in track and field, now has seven: British Columbia has six, Alberta added a pair in track and field to bring its total to four, and New Brunswick and Saskatchewan have one each.

Ontario won the bronze medal in baseball with a 5-3 win over Nova Scotia. The gold and silver medals will be decided today when British Columbia, the defending Games champion, meets Manitoba. The Canadian junior title will be decided at the same time.

Nova Scotia defeated Quebec 1-0 in women's field hockey and qualified for today's final against Ontario which edged Newfoundland 1-0 in a game that had to be decided on penalty shots after overtime. Quebec and Newfoundland play for the bronze.

Quebec and Ontario remained tied for first place in the water polo round-robin with five wins and one tie. The tie game was an 8-8 affair between the same two teams earlier in the week.

The first two places in the men's 200 metres were a replay of the 100. Andre Barriere of St. Guillaume, Que., placed second in both races. Zvonko Stankovic of Vancouver was third. Williams's winning time was 21.93 while Barriere was checked in 21.98 and Stankovic in 22 flat.

Joining Williams on the winning Ontario relay team were Bill Siegman of Sault Ste. Marie, Mike Forgrave of Barrie and Doug Hinds of Mississauga. Their time was 42.12. Quebec was second in 42.17 and B.C. third in 42.18.

The Manitoba relay team broke the Canadian junior record with a 42.08 in the semifinal but had nothing left in the final and placed fourth in 42.52.

Victoria and Island athletes continued to play a prominent part in the games.

Judy Tobacco and Debbie Campbell were members of the B.C. team which earned a silver medal in the 4x400 relay event while Al Sheridan ran the first leg on the B.C. men's 4x100 relay team which took a bronze medal behind Ontario and Quebec.

Tobacco was sixth in the semi-final of the 200 metres and did not qualify for the final.

Ulla Hansen qualified for today's final in the 1,500 metres while Mark Nyhof was third in the men's qualifying round of the high jump.

Wendy Barlow and Nina Bland continued undefeated in the tennis competition heading into today's final action.

Barlow won from Anee Penman of Winnipeg, 6-0, 6-2, and meets Nicole Marois of Quebec for the gold medal. Bland and Suzanne Mathews of West Vancouver defeated Sylvie Bassette and Debbie Harit of Quebec 6-3, 6-2, in the doubles.

Craig Taylor of Courtenay was fifth in the men's long jump with a leap of 6.71 metres.

Happy Erv Parent (left) congratulated by Bill Thompson

A losing finalist last year, Parent defeated Victoria's Bill Thompson, 2 and 1, in the final of the 55th annual event at Victoria Golf Club Friday.

Parent was approximately one under par for the 17 holes but on the 14th he might have thought fate was against him.

One up after 13 holes, Parent hit his tee shot just over the green on the par-three hole. Thompson hooked his tee shot. The ball appeared headed out-of-bounds when it hit a golf cart and bounced back on the green about 10 feet from the hole.

Thompson got a par, Parent took a bogey and the match was all even.

But Parent came back to get a birdie on the 15th. The 16th was halved and Parent dropped an eight foot putt for a birdie four on the 17th after Thompson had missed a 10-foot bid for a birdie.

Thompson previously won the title in 1970, 72, 73 and 74.

Harveys Score Playoff Victory

Harvey's Sporting Goods captured the Sidney Men's Softball League championship Friday and the two people they can thank the most are Frank Scoitt and Dick Michaud.

Scott had three hits, including a two-run home run while Michaud pitched the shutout in Harvey's 9-0 victory in the fifth game of the best-of-five final over Sidney Hotel.

On Thursday Scott hit a four-run homer as Harvey's squared the series 2-2.

Both clubs are entered in a six-team recreational league playoff series this weekend at Heywood and Sanscha parks while Colony of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League and Castle Properties of the Heywood League start best-of-three playoff for the area Senior "C" championship at Central Park, tonight at 6:30.

TENNIS MEET NEXT WEEK

Every available tennis facility in the city and district should be jammed to capacity next week.

'Good Stuff and Shadows'

By The Associated Press

Dennis Eckersley just missed a no-hitter, and it didn't bother him a bit.

"I wasn't frustrated at all by the hit," the Cleveland righthander said Friday. "I know I can't pitch any better than that."

The only hit in the first game of the twi-night American League basedall doubleheader was a first-inning triple by Milwaukee first baseman Cecil Cooper.

"He just reached out and hit a low and away slider down the right field line," Eckersley said.

The Indians defeated the Brewers twice, 2-0 and 5-4. The first-game heroics by Eckersley, were planned that way by Cleveland manager Jeff Torborg.

The one-hitter "was a combination of good stuff and shadows," Torborg said. "It's very difficult to see out there at that time of day. In the early innings, even Freddie (catcher Fred Kendall) had trouble catching his pitches.

In other games, Baltimore Orioles downed Oakland A's 6-1, New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from California Angels, 10-1 and 9-3, Minnesota Twins shaded Detroit Tigers 12-11, Boston Red Sox defeated Seattle Mariners 7-2, Kansas City Royals nipped Toronto Blue Jays 9-8 and Texas Rangers downed Chicago White Sox 10-7.

Reggie Jackson doubled and tripled, driving home three runs in the opener, then smashed two long home runs in the nightcap to lead New York to its sweep over California. Jackson, who doubled home the eventual winning run in the fourth inning of the opener, has driven in 17 runs in his last 12 games. His first homer in the second game snapped a 3-3 tie.

A home run by Jim Rice, his 30th of the season, backed an eight-hitter by Rick Wise as Boston returned to its winning ways against Seattle. The Red Sox, who had an 11-game winning streak snapped Thursday night, scored six runs in the first inning to give Wise his fifth consecutive victory.

Meanwhile, in the National League, Don Sutton's problems continue and they're becoming a cause for concern in the camp of Los Angeles Dodgers.

Sutton, ace of the club's pitching staff, has made five starts for Los Angeles since being named the most valuable player in the all-star baseball game last month. He's lost three and was knocked out and not involved in the decisions in the other two.

The latest setback was a 5-2 stunner against Atlanta in which Sutton took a 2-1 lead into the ninth inning, only to be beaten by Rod Gilbreath's grand slam home run.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates swept a doubleheader from New York Mets 3-2 and 6-5, the second game going 12 innings, Philadelphia Phillies routed Chicago Cubs 10-3, St. Louis Cardinals edged Montreal Expos 2-1, San Francisco Giants edged Cincinnati Reds 4-3 and San Diego Padres topped Houston Astros 5-4.

SHOCKED BY BOYCOTT, AUSSIES CRASH AT BAT

LEEDS, England (Reuter) — England's bowlers took over where the mighty Geoff Boycott left off and Australia crashed to 67 for five at the close of the second day of the fourth cricket test Friday.

The Australians, replying to England's first innings of 436, appeared shocked after bowling to Boycott for 10 hours and 20 minutes and England, two up in the series, now seems certain to win back The Ashes.

Opener Boycott was the last man out after a remarkable 191, which included 23 fours and one five. He was caught at first slip by Greg Chappell off Len Pascoe and was unlucky to miss the honor of being the first Englishman to carry his bat against Australia in England.

Disaster soon struck the out-of-form Australian batsmen when they opened their innings 85 minutes before the close. The ball moved around under the evening cloud and with Mike Hendrick taking wickets with his second and 13th deliveries the heart was soon torn out of the touring team's inconsistent top-order.

Victory gave Victoria 38 points and insurmountable lead over second-place Royal Colwood and Glen Meadows with one match remaining.

Wardrobe Conserves Space

The slotted section keeps his shirts organized in compartments. He can see the one he wants at a glance, and can pull it out on a sliding hardboard tray. Six 8-inch-deep drawers below provide plenty of storage for socks, underwear, sweaters, and extra shirts.

The wardrobe is 8 feet high and 4 feet wide, but only 2 feet deep to conserve valuable bedroom floor space.

Dried-Out Jo-Jo Knows 'Detox' Route

TORONTO (CP) — For 17 years Jo-Jo Johnson drifted through life as a skid-row alcoholic.

For the last three years the Ojibwa Indian from Sutton, Ont., has not had a drink and for eight months he has been employed at St. Michael's Detoxification Centre in Toronto's skid-road area, helping to dry out drunks.

"If it wasn't for 'detox,'" Johnson said, "I'd still be on the road or dead by now."

Johnson, 42, used alcohol, pills and heroin during his drunken years but he is an exception to the rule, he said. Most of those admitted to Ontario's 13 detoxification units (29,671 persons in 1976) simply return during their next bender.

The 1976 readmission rate was 76 per cent and only 21 per cent accepted referrals to rehabilitation programs.

Diane Hobbs, co-ordinator of detoxification and rehabilitation for the Addiction Research Foundation, said about one in 10 returns to society through the system.

Johnson said, "Detox is about the only place where you'll find any real effort to encourage these people to get involved in other programs."

St. Michael's is one of four Metropolitan Toronto detoxification centres and all are affiliated with hospitals. It is open 24 hours a day but sometimes drunks are turned away.

"If we're full up we just have to tell the next guy to come back in the morning," said John Rutledge, supervisor at St. Michael's centre.

"Some have nowhere to go but I look at it this way: They found a way to get through 1,000 other nights — they'll find a way to get through one more."

Johnson said the increasing violence in which drunks are killed or beaten and robbed is the work of the "new breed."

"They're into drugs, not booze. They can't get their kicks unless they hurt someone while they dig (rob) him. It's a sex pervert who has to hurt people."

Johnson, a carpenter who sometimes earned good wages between 17 years of binges on skid road in Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, married a welfare worker two years ago and now owns a house and car.

At St. Michael's, the clients are encouraged to participate in housecleaning and meal-preparation chores, Rutledge said. Guests are expected to stay four days, although there's no forcing them, and during that time a counsellor will mention rehabilitation programs.

Utility Thefts Mount in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gas and electricity thefts have prompted utilities to form squads of investigators and even pay bounties to catch the culprits.

"There are always some people looking for something for nothing," said a spokesman for Consolidated Edison Co. of New York. "But since the energy crisis, it isn't just poor people that we've seen doing this sort of thing. We've found it in fine apartment houses and large commercial establishments."

Devices used by power thieves range from sophisticated electronic gadgets and elaborate plumbing to dime-store magnets and washing machine hoses. Some meters have been adjusted to move slowly or even backwards.

Clarence Eckelmann, manager of electric distribution for New Orleans Public Service Corp., heads a utility industry committee examining the situation.

"We first sensed the problem back in 1970, but in the fall of 1976, it exploded," he said. "In the late 1960s, an attitude developed that utility companies had no right to charge for the energy generated and sold to you.

"Then we were hit by the recession that compounded it. Then inflation came along and the fuel problem that brought increases in rates."

Last year, Con Edison investigators covered 12,000 cases of theft and recovered $6 million for the company.

'Finder' Tries to Give Cash Away

WILLOUGHBY, Ohio (AP) — When Lawrence E. Morrow tells people he has located money they didn't know was theirs, reactions range from exultation to suspicion that he's a con man.

"But I love this work," Morrow said, shrugging off the innuendos of chicanery. "Sure, I like to make a good buck. But I also like to find people. I like the investigation and the responses. And I make better money than working in a factory."

Morrow is a "finder," or heir locator. By scouring state records or from contacts with lawyers, he identifies persons who have unclaimed assets in estates or funds or insurance policies. These assets must be claimed through the state commerce department. The department earlier this year issued names of about 240,000 untraced persons who own $18.5 million in assets and accrued interest.

Despite public advertisements, most people never learn about their possible riches. L. Charles Rhoads, deputy director of the commerce department, said that during the last half of 1976 the department paid back about $300,000.

Morrow, who runs Finders Diversified Inc. here, tries to find persons who are owed $1,000 or more. He said he informs prospective claimants how much money they can expect to recover and proposes a contract calling for a fee of 40 to 50 per cent of the money recovered.

Some of Morrow's assignments are accidental and happy. "I was in the library in Cincinnati once looking at city directories. I met a multimillionaire who was trying to locate heirs to some property in Kentucky which he wanted to buy because he wanted the coal rights to it.

"Well, I got this job which involved tracing heirs to property rights which were deeded in 1877. My investigation took me to southern Ohio, to northern Ohio, to Canada and to Chicago. There I found a relative of the man I was looking for.

"She was 92 years old and living in a nursing home. She remembered that part of the family had moved to El Paso. I called the library in El Paso and there I found some wills. The case is in court now."

Morrow, 32, started being a finder two years ago. He said he had to learn everything as he went along because there is no training for the work. His business has returned $500,000 in two years.

Rhoads said he knows of no problems with Finders Diversified, but he advised people who are approached by a finders group to seek its references and make sure they know how much money is involved in the contract.

He cautioned people to do this before signing a power of attorney to the finders group.

"When I give people a contract they can take it to a lawyer if they want," Morrow said. "Most of my clients will back me up. I helped one person who was so grateful he said he was going to offer my name at mass for five years."

Parents Shamed By Intelligence

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON (CP) — Many parents feel shame rather than pride if their children are exceptionally intelligent, says an article in the British medical journal The Practitioner.

"Some children are even told to conceal their brightness by not trying in school — in case they are regarded as odd or different," says the article by Henry Collis, director of the National Association for Gifted Children.

"One of the most mistaken ideas is that every parent wants to have a gifted child. Not a bit of it. They want clever children who will pass exams and keep them in their dotage.

"But, except in the case of those who are themselves extremely able, parents tend to mistrust the gifted and the problems that can arise with them."

A Nutty Obsession

By HUGH ORGEL

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — In the heart of the Negev desert Dr. Amram Nevo is in pursuit of the perfect pistachio.

His obsession with the small green nut, used to flavor and color ice cream or as a roasted and salted tidbit with cocktails, is 11 years old.

All that time he has been conducting experiments with pistachio trees, hoping to make them grow in uncultivated areas of the arid Negev and yield bumper crops for export.

Nevo, a plant scientist at Ben Gurion University of the Negev, met his destiny when he visited Iran in the early 1960s.

There he found the pistachio.

"I was fascinated by it," he said. "I learned its nature and requirements and thought it might be a good crop for the dry Negev."

He was determined to develop the pistachio as a major Negev crop, but soon realized science knew little about the nut.

What was known was that the pistachio tree was native to the high Iran-Afghanistan plateau and that it took 12 to 15 years to reach maturity and begin bearing its hard-shelled nuts.

Even then, it bore fruit only every second year because of the exceptionally high level of oil and protein the nut needed to absorb.

Not only was the pistachio slow to mature, it was also prone to what Nevo described as abortion. An aborted pistachio tree is one which bears only partly developed fruit or mere empty shells.

After years of trial and error, Nevo said he had perfected the proper mixture of water and fertilizer to make the pistachio grow in suitable areas of the Negev.

By budding and grafting foreign pistachio varieties on locally grown rootstock, Nevo said he had evolved a tree with a reduced rate of abortion and which reached maturity after only eight years.

He has planted 1¼ acres of his own four-acre Negev farm, near Beersheba, with pistachio trees. For the last five years he has marketed them locally but cannot keep up with demand.

Using land hitherto considered non-cultivable, Nevo hopes Israel will soon produce an exportable surplus as well as satisfying domestic pistachio demand.

Present world pistachio demand is double the existing supply.

In Israel much of the 1,000 tons consumed each year has to be imported. The nuts sell at $3.85 a pound.

Memorabilia Marks Royalty

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — In 1947, David Gray began collecting stamps depicting members of the Royal Family. Because he wanted bigger pictures than those appearing on the stamps, he began visiting antique shops and hobby shows.

Now he has a collection of royal memorabilia including china, silver medallions, newspaper clippings and more than 200 books.

Also in his collection are framed letters from the Queen, the Queen Mother and Queen Mary.

Gray wrote Queen Mary in 1951 to say he admired a carpet she had made, which was then on display in Canada.

Her reply was written by a lady-in-waiting, since it is against regulations for monarchs to reply to letters in their own handwriting, probably, Gray thinks, because they might then become items for sale.

Gray's letter from the Queen Mother's private secretary was received in 1974 after he had written to thank her for taking time to visit the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto during a Canadian tour.

Everyone who writes the Queen receives an answer, said Gray. A letter from the Queen's private secretary comes in a black-lined envelope, placed inside a second envelope to ensure that no one can read the contents of the letter.

Other pieces in the Gray collection include a large colored framed picture of King George VI's coronation with the present Queen Mother and the two young princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret.

Despite his love for anything royal, Gray has never been to Britain.

. . . and another good thing about shopping at home is convenience

If it doesn't fit, it's the wrong color, or you get two of them as gifts—What do you do? Drive all over creation for a refund or an exchange?

Not if you've shopped right here in Victoria.

Here, you are doing business with retailers who depend on you as a customer and are eager for repeat business from you.

The total value of any new purchase is measured in more than just the listed price.

You must also be sure that should you need further information or should you have some problem, that the salesman or businessman is available for fast action—whether for warranty work or even a friendly refund.

And the most convenient thing about shopping at home is that you can check out information on products in the comfort of your own home — Through the pages of your two Victoria Daily Newspapers.

The advertisements, inserted by businesses, large and small, keep you informed of the latest market prices, the opening of new stores, special offers, credit terms, hours of operation, parking facilities etcetera.

The progressive Victoria retailers who advertise their goods and services in your daily newspaper not only offer competitive prices and good selection but also back up their sales with on-the-spot availability should you need more information, parts or servicing, or—dare we say it, should you have any complaints to make.

Motor boats dominate Venetian canals

It's arrivederci to magic-muscled gondoliers

By NINO LO BELLO

VENICE — In this city of soggy sidewalks there is today a sad footnote — the decline of the gondolier, one of tourism's most spectacular figures. Unfortunately, he is becoming a vanishing breed, soon to be extinct. So let every tourist of tomorrow take note that before long the bear-shouldered Rower Boys — with their tilted straw hats and loose blouses — will soon move into the limbo of passe personae.

Yes, it's arrivederci and goodbye to the men with the magic muscles who keep the gondolas gliding along the Venetian canals. The fizzle of the gondolier is due to that enemy of Venice's waters — the motor boat. Where it gets both passengers and freight to any location in no time flat, the famed ebony craft, on the other hand, needs extra time and costs more. That's not what the economists would call competitive.

Times are bad in Italy, they are getting worse, and there is no future in the gondola biz, explains a veteran officer of the Cooperative Gondolieri Daniele Manin, the gondoliers' trade union since 1869. "Compared to the golden past, the present doesn't look rosy — and the future is definitely black here," he adds with Dantean poetic flair.

The skipper was not referring to the fact that Venice itself is fast disappearing — it is now sinking at the rate of approximately an inch a year, so that by 1990 the city will be under water. That is still another problem, of course.

With the way his numbers have declined, the gondolier stands to disappear before Venice. A century ago there were as many as 10,000 plying their trade on Main Street, the S-shaped Grand Canal. Today the union reports that fewer than 400 are on the job, and every one of them will tell you that gondola pushing is financially a losing proposition, that the cost of living, inflation, etc., etc.

By working Saturdays and Sundays and by putting in 12 to 14 hours a day, most of which involves waiting for a single fare, a gondolier will earn somewhere between $300 and $400 a month, including tips. These earnings, however, come only during the five-month tourist bulge period in the warm weather.

Off-season, most of the gondoliers go to industrial Milan and Turin or to England to get part-time jobs in big factories, hotels and restaurants. Every year some of these men do not come back to the fabled Queen of the Adriatic because they earn more being away.

Having read the handwriting on the wall and the scribble on the waters, the younger generation shows no preference for the work of a gondolier. Today's youths think that spending all one's time in tough muscular exertions needed to row a boat standing up is a no-no these days, particularly since better money can be earned elsewhere for less work.

Basically, the gondolier's woe stems from the big bad wolf, the motorized waterbus. After one ride in a gondola (at sometimes $12 an hour), most tourists prefer to get around Venice's waterways by using the public motor boats. Native Venetians rarely use a gondola, except to cross a point on a canal where no bridge happens to be nearby. The price for a quick hop is 100 lire (less than 15 cents).

About the only time the locals ever hire a gondola for any length of time is either for a funeral or a wedding entourage. For tourist groups, however, the local hotels do stage evening serenades, during which the gondolas are decked out in colored lights and flowers — with either the gondolier or a hired singer displaying his vocal prowess with a chorus of O Sole Mio and endless arias from Verdi, Puccini and Sinatra.

Travel Tips

By Stan Delaplane

Christiansted is the main town on the island of St. Croix. It looks much like it did when the Danes sold the Americans the Virgin Islands in 1917.

Stone housing built over sidewalk walkways, shading them from the bright Caribbean sun. Steps go down little alleyways. Open into patio restaurants full of tropical greenery.

There's a Danish fort and the governor's palace. The store where Alexander Hamilton worked as a clerk.

Mr. Hamilton left St. Croix and became the first secretary of the treasury of the United States.

He met Aaron Burr at dawn — one of those pistols - for-two - and - coffee - for - one affairs of honor.

Burr was not as distinguished as the secretary. But he was a better shot. Hamilton wound up — as the calypso goes — "Stone cold dead in de market."

We've been rocking along through the Virgin Islands on a 50-foot motor cruiser, Caravel II. It's a lazy, luxurious life. Loafing through clear blue waters with no destination.

No time schedule. No packing. Barefoot and "yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum." In these free port islands, rum is 99 cents a bottle.

Caravel II carries four passengers. The cost is $70 a day per person and includes all food and all drinks.

It's owned by two Canadian brothers. Their mother was a chef. Both are excellent cooks. Also canny card players.

"We don't play for money," they said. "We play for slave points."

People who get most slave points make the others slave over the dishwashing. The brothers love to cook. Hate doing dishes.

I think they're using a marked deck.

The Danes didn't make enough money in the Virgins to do much reconditioning. The buildings keep a sleepy tropical appearance while new owners remodel interiors into pleasant little tourist shops and restaurants.

Ships can't dock. So Christiansted has a slow pace. Unlike Charlotte Amalie on St. Thomas where three to five enormous cruise ships a day pour thousands of frantic shoppers onto the narrow streets.

Stores are jammed. Ladies from the cruise ships snatch perfume from the counter — and each other.

"I saw it first!"

"I beg your pardon! I chose that bottle five minutes ago!"

"Clerk! Clerk! I'd like some attention here, please!"

The bars feature drinks with exotic names. (Sunset colors and flavor of unleaded gasoline in my opinion.) "Rum's the tipple and the heart's delight of the old, bold mate of Henry Morgan."

Most drinks are loaded with rum — which gives the innkeeper quite an edge since he buys it at 99 cents a bottle and sells at $1.25 a drink.

But you don't come to the rum-and-sugar islands to drink cooking sherry. The breezy, shady bars are full of people drinking banana or strawberry daiquiris.

Maui's legendary volcano exudes spectacular peace

KAHULUI, HAWAII — Stretching 33 miles long over 10,000 feet high, the dormant volcano known as Haleakala dominates the island of Maui much like a grande dame demanding that visitors pay call on her. And well they should.

Legend has it that the mountain received its name from an adventure of the young demigod Maui, who figured prominently in Hawaiian and all Polynesian mythology:

Hina, Maui's mother, complained that the sun sped across the sky so swiftly that it was impossible for her to dry the tapa cloth. Maui climbed the highest point on the island, which happened to be the top of the great mountain.

There he waited for the sun to pass. When it did, he ensnared it in a net. The sun pleaded for its release, and Maui agreed on condition that the sun travel more slowly across the sky each day. The sun agreed. The mountain Maui stood on to capture the sun is known by the name Hale-a-ka-la, the house of the sun.

Today this once-violent volcano is part of the National Park Service with facilities for campers, hikers, backpackers, picnickers, as well as for the ordinary sightseer.

In addition the park service maintains three cabins in the crater for visitor use. Each cabin accommodates 12 persons and comes equipped with bunks, blankets, water, cookstove, firewood, and kerosene lamp. The cabins are accessible only by foot or on horseback and must be reserved well in advance.

To reserve a cabin write to the Superintendent, Haleakala National Park, Box 456, Kahului, Maui, Hawaii 96732. Be sure you include an outline of the proposed trip, the number in your party, and the exact dates you wish to reserve a cabin. Reservations are limited to a maximum of three nights. The person in charge of your party must be 18 or older.

Haleakala crater: Streaked with reds, browns, grays, yellows

Even if you plan a short sight-seeing stop rather than an overnight stay in the park you will find Haleakala a treasure trove for the eye and the mind. The crater of the volcano is a cone-studded arena streaked with reds, brown, grays, and yellows.

Birds, small mammals, plants, as well as the erstwhile visitor, inhabit the park region. Birdwatchers should be on the lookout for the native apapane, iiwi, and amakihi. You might also spy the Hawaiian owl known as pueo, who makes an occasional appearance. Finches, skylarks, mockingbirds dart in and around the park, too.

Probably the most famous of the plants that grow in Haleakala park is the silversword, known in Hawaiian as the ahinahina. The silversword is a remarkable and highly evolved plant, since it must withstand both the extreme dryness of the cinder cones and the intense sun of the high elevation.

When in flower the plant sports a central disk of a hundred yellow florets surrounded in turn by purplish ray florets. The effect is breathtaking. To see the silversword in flower, plan to come to the park between June and October. The entire plant dies after flowering only once.

But beyond all this Taleakala remains the abode of the sun. And at no time is this more apparent than at sunrise. Seeing the sunrise from the summit of Haleakala is an experience visitors to Maui talk about long after their return home.

If you're planning an excursion to Haleakala, think about making the sunrise drive. If your knees quake at the thought of driving the winding curves up to 10,000 feet in the darkness of the early morning, you can take any of the popularly scheduled tours which have the sunrise venture on their itinerary.

The park entrance is located over 6,000 feet high. The visitor centre makes its appearance at 9,745 feet and is located at the crater rim.

A mile up the road from this point is the Red Hill Summit, the goal of all sun watchers and known in Hawaiian as Puu Ulaula. The elevation here is over 10,000 feet and as the sign advises: Walk slowly at this elevation. There is an enclosed glass observatory for viewing from indoors.

Weather conditions, particularly the cloud cover, can differ from day to day. If you can bear the wind, by all means venture out of the glass enclosure. Here in the cold air it's not uncommon for visitors to take a deep breath and reflect on the sights around them. A sense of absolute peace touches everyone who waits here for the sunrise.

You can plot the sun's approach as the dark clouds give way to the orange and red and, finally, the sun itself, larger than anyone might have thought, rises out of the clouds below.

Once the sun is up take time to view other things. On a clear day you can see Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea on Hawaii from the observatory window. To the west you might be able to see Molokai, Lanai, and Kahoolawe. You will need a particularly clear day to see Oahu to the west as well.

Pilgrimages preserve magnificent mansions

Natchez revives Old South

Once a year this colorful antebellum town along the Mississippi goes through its act.

For nearly half a century ladies in hoop skirts and gentlemen in planter suits have guided visitors through nearly three dozen pre-Civil War mansions in a month-long observance.

Candles glow and jasmine hangs heavy in the air, and the illusion is created that the lifestyle of the mid-1800s never really went kaput.

Natchez's annual Spring Pilgrimage was ushered in during the Depression years to raise money for maintaining the town's historic old homes. This year the pleasant Mississippi village plans a curtain call presenting the Natchez Pilgrimage for another two weeks in October.

IT WILL BE an encore, a repeat of past performances, an experiment. The good ladies of the two garden clubs sponsoring the springtime observance are anxious to learn whether the Fall Pilgrimage will be equally successful.

As the oldest town along the Mississippi, Natchez was founded in 1716. During the mid-1800s more than half of America's millionaires accumulated their wealth in the region. In the promising years of the 19th century, plantations produced fortunes. Cotton was king and the wealth was beyond imagination.

The plantations spanned hundreds of acres, but with the end of the Civil War the wealth vanished — along with the demand for cotton.

Lace curtains rotted at the windows. Shutters rattled in the wind. Natchez, a longtime centre of culture, was dying, and for the remainder of the century it slumbered.

Although Union forces occupied Natchez during the siege of Vicksburg, Gen. Grant ordered his troops to spare its buildings. As a result, more than 200 antebellum structures still stand while Natchez preaches to the nation that "this is where the Old South still lives."

DIVIDING THEIR forces into two groups, the ladies of Natchez formed the Natchez Garden Club and the Pilgrimage Garden Club. Together they share a single purpose: the preservation of the city's great antebellum mansions.

Serving as headquarters for the Pilgrimage Club is Staton Hall, a princely, 119-year-old residence whose groups occupy an entire city block. Beyond the garden the ladies operate a bar and restaurant — siphoning off goodly profits for the restoration of other great homes in Natchez.

Meanwhile, the Natchez Garden Club does its act in Connelly's Tavern, a misnomer because it's as dry as a church social on the sabbath. The fact is, Connelly's Tavern is a former hostelry that was rescued from collapse and restored by the ladies to its former glory.

One of the architectural gems of Natchez, it exemplifies the frontier elegance that prevailed during the early years of the Mississippi Territory.

It was here also that the American flag was raised in 1797 by Maj. Andrew Ellicott, acting on orders of President George Washington.

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

AMONG NATCHEZ'S antebellum homes only the Wigwam caters to overnight visitors. The home of Buzz Harper, an ex-Arkansas juvenile judge, the mansion dates from 1790, a 16-room museum jammed to its spacious ceilings with antiques. Gas lamps burn in its hallways and its dining room and one of its ceilings was frescored by Dominque Canova.

At the Wigwam guests snooze in half-tester beds and attend organ and piano recitals presented by Harper and his wife in their ornate music room.

The price for living in the style of an old cotton king comes to $35 a night, including the continental breakfast.

During the spring pilgrimage every public guest room in Natchez is packed to capacity. It remains to be seen what fall will bring. What with 25,000 visitors and fewer than 1,000 hotel and motel rooms, the springtime crunch is felt all the way from the Mississippi River to the outskirts of town.

With the upcoming autumn pilgrimage, Natchez expects similar crowds.

MASSIVE COLUMNS support such grand old mansions as Rosalie, The Elms, The Briars, Cherokee, Elms Court, Elgin, Fair Oaks, Gloucester, Dunleith, D'Evereaux, Auburn and Longwood.

The latter, the largest octagonal house in America, remains unfinished — a star attraction in the lineup of antebellum homes.

A superb example of mid-19th-Century Oriental style, Longwood became the first national historic landmark in Natchez.

Mostly, though, Greek revival dominates the architectural style among the old mansions, a classic example being Dunleith with its great colonnaded galleries.

Another imposing mansion, Rosalie, was the headquarters of Union troops during the occupation of Natchez. With original furnishings still intact, it serves today as the state shrine of the Mississippi Daughters of the American Revolution.

NEARBY, great oaks cast their shadows on Green Leaves, the residence of 79-year-old Ruth Beltzhoover, whose ancestors built the mansion in 1849. Ruth Beltzhoover has lived in Green Leaves since she was a bride. What's more she insists, she intends to remain until her final days.

Like Spanish moss dripping from some gnarled old oak, history hangs heavy in Natchez. Its homes have sheltered such legendary figures as Henry Clay, LaFayette, Jenny Lind, Samuel Clemens and Stephen Foster.

For the visitor who misses either the Spring or Fall Pilgrimage, 13 of Natchez's great homes remain open year-round, as does King's Tavern — considered to be the oldest house in the Natchez Territory.

Operated as a tavern between 1789 and 1820, it was restored in 1970 by the Pilgrimage Garden Club with a Southern-style menu featuring mint juleps, warm cider, sausage, red beans, rice, gumbo and catfish.

WHILE LACKING antebellum history, the passenger terminal for the old Illinois Central Railroad serves as another Natchez restaurant. The Side Track. Leading off the menu are fried oysters, gulf shrimp, Mississippi river catfish and a unique libation consisting of gin, lemon juice, sugar, ginger and beer that the proprietor calls the Nude Prude. Says the management: "The bare fact is that after one glass of this blend the customer could become rude, crude or stewed, although usually there is just a nice, warm, uninhibited glow."

Other action takes place along Silver St. beside the muddy old Mississippi, Silver St. being the only remaining avenue in that section of the city called Natchez-Under-The-Hill.

During cotton days it was lined with bordellos — as well as rough and tumble saloons. Mississippians compared it with San Francisco's Barbary Coast, claiming it was the wickedest piece of real estate in the entire nation.

Recently several Natchez citizens got their imaginations in gear and livened up the once-deserted street with a saloon featuring mint juleps and a restaurant that serves hush puppies, mustard greens, corn bread and catfish.

In case anyone asks, that's soul food, brother, real honest-to-goodness soul food.

RUB-A-DUB-DUB, BOAT IS A TUB

BIG CHALLENGE was met by Shawn Lambert, 15, of 2844 Rockwell, Wednesday when he sailed by bathtub boat from Victoria to Port Angeles. He made the trip in 59 minutes, beating the Coho ferry and also his escort boat, which developed engine problems midway across the strait. Lambert, a Times carrier, decided to attempt the crossing because "it has always been a challenge to us."

Macao Gambling Profit $60M

MACAO (Reuter) — There's not a James Bond in sight, none of the glittering sophistication of a Casino Royale, but the gambling palaces in the Portuguese territory of Macao have a unique style.

Macao's four casinos are open 24 hours a day, every day of the year, and on weekends and Hong Kong public holidays there is a regular invasion of gamblers from the British colony 40 miles to the east across the Peal River estuary.

They come in their tens of thousands, by hydrofoil, jetfoil and ferry—businessmen, servants, hawkers, laborers, prostitutes, housewives, anyone with a passion for gambling and money to spend.

No one dresses up to go to the casino, except at Chinese New Year, the only occasion when Portuguese civil servants in Macao are allowed to try their luck at the tables.

The atmosphere is very Chinese, full of noise, smoke and color. Sometimes wizened old men in dirty rags place huge amounts of money on the tables, accepting their luck with a nonchalance that suggests they play with such sums every day.

The Chinese are among the most gambling-crazy people in the world and, in terms of the amounts gambled, Macao must rival the world's two other gambling meccas, Monte Carlo and Las Vegas.

The casinos are operated by a syndicate which is estimated to make a gross profit annually of at least $60 million, providing 20 per cent of the Macao administration's total revenue.

Opportunities for gambling in Macao are almost endless. Apart from the casinos, there is a dog track and a jai-alai stadium. A trotting circuit is under construction.

The casinos offer not only the usual diversions, roulette, baccarat, blackjack and poker machines, but also a number of purely Chinese gambling games.

In one of the Chinese games called Fan Tan, the croupier plunges an inverted silver cup into a pile of porcelain buttons and then moves the cup containing a number of the buttons to one side.

After bets are placed, the cup is lifted, and the buttons counted off in groups of four. Bets are made on how many buttons will be left at the end of the count, one, two, three or four.

Each count includes about 40 buttons, but as soon as the cup is lifted, the experienced gamblers can see at once which number has won and start smiling or walking off in disgust long before the count is over.

One Portuguese resident who lived on one of Macao's outer islands during the Second World War when deaths due to famine and beri-beri were common, said the bodies were loaded on junks and shipped to the outer islands for burial.

The workmen on the islands, the resident said, always took bodies off the junks in groups of four. They were playing fan tan with them.

Friend ads successful

Rainbow Ministries, a new outreach program of the Baptist Church, has just completed its first month of successful operation in Greater Victoria.

The program, designed to lead people back to Christ, involves an advertising program on local radio and television, telling people that if they feel unwanted or unloved they have a friend at 388-5050.

A report distributed to members of the Baptist congregation appealing for prayers and funds to keep the program rolling, says that many people have been calling in, some for the second and third time.

"A number have accepted Christ or come in for counselling, while several are already attending local churches," the report says.

Rainbow Centre, at 202, 3400 Douglas has a monthly budget of $5,500, and is appealing through circulars issued through Baptist charges for Christian supporters to give $1 a day or $30 a month to "support a vision of God that is already beginning to reach our city."

"Our telephone workers are in the front line of a powerful attack on the negative thinking patterns of darkness in our city. Pray for them," the report asks.

The permanent staff is made up of the following people:

● Doug Kooy, who has extensive experience in radio and television and was formerly director of a hotline radio show in San Jose, California. Kooy is the orignator of the idea, oversees the centre and is a host on the television program Come Together.

● Lane Friesen, who until a year ago was a research physicist at University of Victoria and involved with students in afiiliation with the Navigators. Lane wrote most of the training materials and now is doing administration and some counselling.

● Warren Clark, who has been involved in three crisis lines and two training centres as well as having a background in the Agape Force. Highly qualified to deal with emergency calls and crisis counselling, Warren co-ordinates follow-ups on callers.

● Tom Spencelayh, a Victoria elementary schoolteacher with a real heart for people, is responsible for the co-ordination and much of the training and scheduling of telephone volunteers.

● Mary Rosson, the secretary, has worked with Life-Line and Upper Room Society.

This past week, volunteers have been training at the centre and the program, emphasizing worship, the Word and workshop, will continue Thursday evenings.

"Rainbow Ministries is being fine-tuned by the Lord to affect our society with the positive message of Jesus Christ," the ministry report says.

"Christ has no hands but our hands to do His work today;
"He has no feet but our feet to lead men on the way.
"He has no tongue but our tongues to tell men how He died;
"He has no help but our help to bring men to His side."

Krywyn family: Faith on the go

If faith is where you find it, you may find it at any point along the 50,000 miles of highways and byways that the Roman Krywyn family travels each year.

Krywyn, with wife Mary and children, Roman 5, and Mary 4, ended a four-day crusade at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel in Victoria Friday and start a six-day crusade at the Villa Hotel in Nanaimo on Monday.

A crusade is booked for Courtenay, Aug. 22-27 at the Courtenay Recreation Association Hall. All sessions start at 7:30 p.m.

Bookings also are planned for Campbell River, Duncan and Port Alberni.

Roman Krywyn, 33, says he began preaching at the age of eight in Caracas, Venezuela, where his father also was a preacher. The family had moved to South America from Germany during the Second World War.

Krywyn says he has been travelling constantly for the last seven years.

This is the second visit to Vancouver Island of the Charismatic Crusade with the Krywyn Family (the words are written on the family's motor home).

Brochures announcing the sessions exhort the faithful to "Come expecting a miracle from God."

"I've never had a service where nothing happened," Krywyn says when asked if there are times that miracles simply do not occur. "To me, either God is alive or He isn't and I know He is."

He claims medically documented proof of a five-year-old boy who had one foot shorter than the other and, after prayer, "In 15 seconds it grew right out . . . The doctors had to admit it was a miracle."

A woman medically verified to have a cancerous tumor growing on her head and who had been given six months to live, was cured during a Krywyn crusade, he says. The woman has become a good friend of the family.

Music plays a major part in a Krywyn crusade: Roman plays guitar, wife Mary, 27, plays piano and all four family members sing. Roman preaches from 30 to 40 minutes. The program includes singing of scripture choruses from the King James Bible.

As Krywyn puts it: "The word of God is preached in its power and authority" and all are invited to be part of "worship in the Lord in a spirit and moving in the gifts of the Holy Spirit."

Travelling with young children and a pet poodle can have certain inherent problems, such as schooling.

This will be solved, in part at least, for the Krywyns when the youngsters begin a correspondence course in September.

Bibles for boredom

As solution for children bored with summer vacation, Seventh-day Adventist Church, 983 Pandora, offers Bible school Aug. 22-26. Children ages five to 13 are invited to free service 9 a.m. to noon. New times for synod

CALGARY (CP) — The Anglican Church of Canada will hold its synod sessions once every three years, delegates attending the 28th session decided Friday.

In the past, the synod has met once every two years.

The decision by the 262 delegates — both clergy and laity — to hold the meeting every third year means the next session will be held in 1980 rather than in 1979.

The Beatties with friend at Ng Gardens, Hong Kong

Baha'is live religion to attract outsiders

Although it frowns on the kind of proselytizing done by some of the more active Christian sects, the Baha'i faith expects a lot from those of its members who volunteer for what is called "pioneering" overseas.

This emerged from a recent interview with Daphne Beattie, a former Victoria grandmother, Montessori teacher and wife of insurance adjuster Bob Beattie, during a brief return visit to Victoria — although Mrs. Beattie would be the last person to admit it.

The Beatties became members of this independent world religion, which stresses the oneness of the world of humanity, in Nanaimo in 1950, and were active members of the faith in the community until 1961, when they volunteered for their first pioneering post, in Scotland.

The teachings of the religion require volunteers to finance their own way to their post — which is selected by the national assembly of the originating country — and then to support themselves in the new land by their earnings there.

A Baha'i pioneer is not permitted to go around knocking on doors to obtain converts, but must do so by the power of good example alone, Mrs. Beattie said.

After three years in Scotland "during which all my children developed Scottish accents," the family was sent to Prince George to help the faith become established there.

A brief and adventurous excursion by Vauxhall Viva with her two by-now nearly adult daughters to San Pedro Sula, Honduras, for more pioneering, ended when Mrs. Beattie and her husband were offered the privilege of going to Quebec City for a stint.

Because of the Baha'i belief in the oneness of man, the religion sees Canada with its divisions between French and English-speaking peoples and natives and whites as a country with a special mission.

However, a year in Quebec City proved to be unsuited to the Beatties and they applied to go to the Philippines, an area where rapid conversions — including entire villages — are occurring.

The Canadian national assembly — a body of nine administrators elected by the 1,000 local communities across the land, including six in Greater Victoria — suggested instead they should go to Hong Kong, which the couple — their children now having all flown the nest, most of them also to become pioneers themselves, left for last October.

"We don't go out and push people," Mrs. Beattie said.

"Baha'u'llah (prophet-founder of the faith, whose name translated from Arabic means Glory of God) taught that in an age when man had the full faculty of reason, each person had a responsibility to do his own search for truth.

"We make mention of the religion and try to live the kind of life that will encourage friends and acquaintances to ask us about the faith," she said.

"Throughout the ages, religion has been an aid in educating man and helped to produce a higher state of civilization.

"God has revealed His word in each period of history through a chosen individual, called variously a prophet or messenger, whom Baha'is call the Manifestation of God.

"Abraham, Moses, Krishna, Buddha, Zoroaster, Christ, Muhammad, among others, were also manifestations of God.

"The Baha'i faith is simply the latest revelation from God, and we believe that man has reached maturity so we don't have missionaries, priest, or ministers," Mrs. Beattie said.

Each person is responsible for his or her own spiritual development once a member of the faith.

Besides the texts of the earlier prophets, Baha'is have the 100 volumes and tablets (letters) that Baha'u'llah wrote during his long period of incarceration during the Ottoman empire 130 years ago, to learn from. Also there are interpretations from his son Abdu'l-Baha and Shogi Effendi Rabbani, guardian of the faith until his death in 1957. More guidance issues from the Universl House of Justice, headquartered in Haifa, Israel, which is elected by all the national councils of the world every five years.

Some of the teachings of Baha'u'llah include:

- God in essence in unknowable, but his will is made known through chosen messengers.
- Mankind must actively work to abolish all forms of prejudice, whether religious, racial, class or national.
- True religion and true science are in harmony.
- The equality of men and women must be assured in all the rights and privileges of society.
- The adoption of a universal auxiliary language is essential to world unity.
- The abolition of the extremes of wealth and poverty is an aspect of the 'age of justice' now dawning.
- Daily work, performed in the spirit of service, is exalted to the rank of worship.
- The establishment of a permanent and universal peace through world government will be achieved in this century.

Besides being clergyless, the faith has a unique organizational structure, said Mrs. Beattie.

At the top is the Universal House of Justice, elected every five years by the national spiritual assemblies of each of more than 300 countries and territories. The national assemblies in turn are elected by the local assemblies, which ususally conform to municipal boundaries.

Each of the assemblies is elected by secret ballot and no electioneering is permitted.

The matter of financing is left up to the individual Baha'i and no solicitations are permitted. No set amount or percentage is required as in other faiths, but the magnitude of the sacrifice is meaningful to the giver.

To join the faith, one merely has to accept its tenets, its principal figures and administrative order. Application is made to the local spiritual assembly, of which there are six in Victoria — Victoria, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Colwood, View Royal and Saanich.

Apart from requiring its members to abstain from alcohol and narcotic drugs, there are no restrictions on food or drink, except during the annual month of fasting, when Baha'is try to go for 19 days from March 2 to March 20 without taking food or drink between sunrise and sunset. March 21 is New Year's Day, when a feast is held. The Baha'i year is divided into 19 months of 19 days.

A daily prayer is obligatory, while once every 19 days, there is a feast during which prayers are read, consultation and correspondence of the local assembly is discussed, followed by a social period during which refreshments are served.

The 19-day feast is usually held in the house of one of the local assemoly members.

Further information about the faith will be provided at an open house at 3461 Seymour, Saanich, on Aug. 21 between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m., or through the Baha'i Information Service, in care of Bill Skuce of 330 Ridley (478-9789).

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. DAVIDSON

On Monday, Aug. 22, the general council of the United Church of Canada, meeting in Calgary, will elect a new moderator, who on Sunday, Aug. 28, will replace the present moderator, Dr. Wilbur K. Howard and will serve a two-year term.

The moderator is, by definition in the church's constitutional document, "the chief executive officer of the church," although the office, after the merely ceremonial requirements have been met, becomes pretty much what the incumbent makes of it.

Over the years a few incumbents have made a good deal of it, with a few others being little more than figureheads.

Those who have exercised some authority have brought to the office exceptional competence and persuasiveness — and the nerves of a good stud-poker player. A past moderator told me that the holder of the office may be slightly corrupted by vanity but that there is no danger of his being corrupted by power because he has so little.

The word "moderator" comes from the Latin moderare — to impose a modus, a limit. It came into use in early Scottish Presbyterianism to designate a person presiding over any administrative body in the church.

The minutes of the general assembly for 1563 state that a "moderator should be appointed for avoiding confusion in reasoning." The suggestions that one of the duties of a moderator is to maintain a semblance of order among apt-to-be-unruly ecclesiastics is not without current significance.

Nine persons have been nominated for the moderatorship this year, and there can be other nominations from the floor of the council.

Six ministers and three of the laity have been nominated, one of each being a woman. All moderators since the church was formed in 1925 have been men, and all but one of them, the missionary surgeon, Dr. Robert B. McClure have been ministers.

I would not presume to advise the new moderator on how to do his, or her, job, but I respectfully suggest that he, or she, meditate on the functions of two other kinds of moderator.

A 19th-century oil lamp had a mechanical arrangement called a "moderator," which controlled the flow of oil from the reservoir to the burner. In the United Church there does seem to be a need for some moderation of the flow of mimeographed and printed instructions and admonitions and miscellaneous urgings from the denominational bureaucracy to the more than 4,000 congregations.

The word "moderator" is also applied to substances — graphite, heavy water, beryllium — which are used in an atomic pile for the rapid slowing down of neutrons emitted as a result of nuclear fission. I wouldn't want to make too much of that, but anyone worried about some of the goings-on in the United Church can profitably let his, or her, imagination have a nice workout on it.

Talk on Jews topic at church

As part of the Roman Catholic Church's ecumenical movement, Sacred Heart Church will hear a talk on The Jews — Our Anguish, Roots and Hope, at five masses next weekend.

The address will be given by James Milord, writer, social worker and teacher, who, incidentally, will assume a United Church pastorate at Lambdis, Sask., in September.

Present for at least two of the masses will be Rabbi Leo Abrami, of Emanuel Synagogue, who, as a boy in France in the Second World War, carried a Catholic baptism certificate to save him from the Nazis.

Abrami will be present at the 7:30 p.m. mass on Saturday, Aug. 20, and at the 8:30 a.m. mass the following day.

Other masses at which Milord will speak are at 9:30 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Key Unity Role Seen for Ethnic Groups

FREDERICTON (CP) — Canada's ethnic communities have a key role to play in the preservation of national unity, say two faculty members of Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto.

In a paper presented to the Canadian Society for the Comparative Study of Civilizations, Dr. Donald Gyallay, director of Ryerson's Management Development Institute, and Dr. George Korey, the institute's executive vice-president, said immigrants from other parts of the world have added a new dimension to the original consensus of the founding fathers of British and French extraction.

They told the meeting, a part of the Congress of Learned Societies, that the commitment of the immigrants to Canada's welfare and prosperity "often seems stronger than that of the descendants of the original settlers."

"These people of different ethnic backgrounds who opted for a free and strong Canada have a vested interest in their new adoptive country," their paper said. "They do not want their new-found happiness threatened by blind ignorance and self-destructing prejudice inside and sinister forces outside."

Gyallay and Korey said separation would be a retrograde step for Quebec and would harm the rest of the country and that all justified aspirations of Quebecers can be achieved within the Canadian context.

But a renewal of the 1867 consensus is needed to prevent the breakup of Canada, they said.

In addition to the separatist trend in Quebec, there were major economic problems in other parts of the country, "the underprivileged economy of the Maritimes, the unstable agriculture of the Prairies and the controversial natural resources and energy position of the two western provinces."

But they viewed Quebec separatism as the major problem because of its "complex political, cultural and socio-economic ramifications."

"Separatism challenges the basic concept of Canadianism and it eats at the very roots of our survival as a united country," they said.

As a first step, they called for recognition of Canada's cultural pluralism.

"The Canada of today is very different from the Canada of only 25 years ago and nobody can insist on a status quo. Accepting realities and making concessions will not weaken Canada. On the contrary, satisfying the largest possible number of vested interests would strengthen Confederation."

Regional interests should be given greater scope at the federal level, together with ethnic viewpoints, in a remodelled Senate and specific guaranteed should safeguard French national and cultural development.

Gyallay and Korey stressed that a new Canadian unity of purpose must arise from a genuine acceptance of the principle of harmony in diversity.

"Our very Canadianism dictates to us that unity need not be a melting pot; integration of different cultural heritages creates a national cultural harmony which is more than the sum of its component parts.

Prince Must Skip Militia Birthday

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prince Charles will not attend the Royal Winnipeg Rifles' Nov. 9 birthday celebrations because of Royal Jubilee commitments.

However, commanding officer Lieutenant-Colonel Bill Spence said Thursday he hopes the prince will visit the militia unit next spring.

Prince Charles was named colonel-in-chief of the Royal Winnipeg Rifles in June.

The unit, which is celebrating its 94th anniversary this fall, has a peacetime strength of just under 200 members.

All That Huffing and Puffing But Washroom Wall Won't Fall

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Five wars have never produced an obstacle that has taken the Royal Canadian Regiment longer to overcome than the washroom wall in its own A-block building.

The invincible wall hides an antiquated washroom that blocks a much-needed expansion of the regimental museum at Wolseley Barracks.

Capt. Ray Britton, museum curator and regimental adjutant, explained that before any structural changes can be made in the museum, the ministry of national defence has to give its approval.

A request to demolish the wall has been meandering through the chain of command for the last year.

The museum has more than enough artifacts to fill the additional space and enough visitors to justify exhibiting as much material as possible, Britton said.

"By 1983 we hope the museum will encompass a mini-theatre to show historical films and a proper archives," he said. "The museum is becoming more popular, especially to the American visitors to the city."

Ironically, more Americans than local residents seem to be aware of the museum's existence, said Cpl. Ed Duffney, one of three forces personnel assigned to the museum. "A lot of people in London don't realize it's here."

Located on the second floor of the original barracks building erected in 1886, the museum crams much history into a few square feet.

London children frequently visit it in school or club and scout tours and word is working back to their parents.

Displays of historical material in area shopping centres, part of a new community program that may be resumed in the fall, should also spread the word about the museum, Britton said.

Since its formation in 1883, the Royal Canadian Regiment, Canada's oldest, has distinguished itself in the Northwest Rebellion, Boer War, First World War, Second World War, Korean War and in its recent peace-keeping role in Cyprus.

The museum is arranged chronologically, but the proposed expansion would allow it to devote individual rooms to chronological displays of uniforms, weapons, medals and photographs.

"The weapons display is quite an attraction," Master Cpl. Jim Wellhauser said, adding that the Boer War exhibit of old uniforms, equipment and photographs is a close second.

Medals remain the museum's pride and joy.

"A lot of people donate their medals to the museum," Duffney said. But because medals are so important to those to whom they were awarded, those awarded during the Second World War and Korea are generally kept by their owners.

Britton says he craves a Victoria Cross, but it is a difficult commodity to procure. Former regiment member Brig. Milton Gregg won a Victoria Cross in 1917 at Vimy Ridge, but he retains it at his home in Fredericton.

Gregg, a spry 84, visited London recently to take the salute at the regiment's trooping the color ceremony.

Any medal awarded in 1918 or earlier is almost certain to be in the museum's collection. American medals of every nature are also at Wolseley, including the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Not every artifact reflects the spit and polish of the regiment, however. Many are grim reminders of battles that added names to the roll of honor in the museum's chapel. German shell casings, Nazi flags, Boer bayonets, Russian machineguns.

Britton said he hopes to add a heavy weapons display to the museum's collection soon. He already has a nine-pounder cannon from the Northwest Rebellion on display in a vacant room nearby and has plans to add more artillery.

FATAL MOVE

Al Buckland (rated 1876) played Walter Trosclair (2076) in the first round in the Pro-Amateur tournament in New Orleans, in June. At move 27, Black makes a spectacular move — what you might call "a gallery pleasing move" overlooking the fine reply by his opponent. He lost soon afterwards, and then stormed out of the hall not to return for further play. He could have won if his 27th move had been P-QB4 instead of Q-R6.

Nude Title Claimed By West Germany

BONN (Reuter)—West Germany claims to be the world champion in naturism, with about one million of its people regularly going nude on beaches and in parks and pools.

Officials of the country's nudist organizations say one West German in eight has sported naked in public at some time.

Germans are also the world's top tourists, and an increasing share of the more than $8.5 billion they spend abroad each year goes toward nudist holidays, travel firms report.

Favorite destinations for nudists' holidays are on Germany's North Sea and Baltic shores, Yugoslavia's Adriatic coast, Corsica and France's Atlantic and south coasts.

Accommodation ranges from self-catering apartments and bungalows to luxury hotels where clothes need only be worn for meals and formal dancing.

About 150,000 people belong to West German nudist clubs, known as Freikoerperkultur of institutes. Two-thirds of them are members of the 100 organizations grouped in the National Federation.

"There has been a huge jump in the appeal of naturism in the 1970s. The future looks rosy with our membership growing at a rate of more than 10 per cent a year," federation vice-president Karl Dreszen said.

He said between eight and 10 million of West German's 62 million people indulge in nudism at least occasionally.

Federation president Oskar Hoerrle, 60, who has headed the organization for a decade, said nudism helps people socially.

"When a person stands naked in front of another, he is stripped of trappings of wealth and snobbishness. He can't even reach for his cheque book because he doesn't have a pocket. . . . that is one of the great attractions of nudism in a world where social stresses are constantly growing."

The West German travel firm of Oboena, the biggest concern in Europe specializing in nudist holidays, says the return-to-nature boom is connected with a radical change in the public's views on morality.

"Even parents have come around to the idea that it is perfectly natural to take children with them on nudist vacations," said a company spokesman. "A quarter of our clients go on holiday as part of a whole family."

The spokesman said 73 per cent of Oboena's customers are married couples. It's clients are predominantly under 40 years old, but its oldest regular patron is well over 80.

Nudism is not simply a matter of returning to nature by romping naked along the sands. The federation's 180 member club have their own inland lesiure centres, many on the outskirts of towns and cities, screened from the public gaze. Most have their own sports facilities.

"We play many kinds of sport in the nude—badminton, tennis, handball, volleyball, swimming, skittles, aquadiving, yachting, even skiing," Dreszen said.

Nudism is not just a summer attraction. Major German travel firms offer nudist winter holidays. Naturalists can ski—fully-clothed—during the day and relax in the evening by swimming naked in heated pools.

'SYNTHETIC HOUSES AND JUNK FOODS'

OTTAWA (CP) — With the sociological and technological changes which have occurred since the Second World War, more and more people have found themselves badly adapted to their environment, says clinical ecologist John Maclennan.

Maclennan, one of about six clinical ecologists in the country, says Canadians have become a medicative society with painkillers and sedatives.

"We live in synthetic houses and rely on prepacked junk foods and household sprays," he said.

Any one of these environmental newcomers can produce an allergic reaction and it is Maclennan's job to find out which one is responsible.

Maclennan maintains an office in Hamilton where sophisticated allergy testing equipment is used to test patients referred to him when conventional allergy tests and treatments haven't solved their problems.

Mclennan considers the total environment his field of study, everything from smoke, Christmas trees and dyes to the more than 1,800 chemical additives used in the production of food.

Some allergists are a bit skeptical about acknowledging the broad range of environmental substances which can cause allergies, but more and more are coming around to Maclennan's way of thinking, he says.

The great drawback with his testing techniques is that they are extremely time-consuming because the antigens are administered one by one to a patient to isolate an allergic reaction. Maclennan also has a host of sniff tests which will produce a reaction to substances in the air, such as animal fur, mould spores, wool and other fibres.

All-Woman Riot Squad

By KATHRYN TOLBERT

TOKYO (AP) — How do you soften the image of helmeted, masked, shield-bearing, clubwielding riot police with a history of tear-gas battles with demonstrators?

Add an all-woman riot squad, the Tokyo Metropolitan Police Department decided.

In trim blazers and skirts and with no battle gear or identification except for an armband and two small round badges on their lapels, the 201-member unit came into existence in April.

Its first job was to maintain order at the Imperial Palace on the emperor's birthday when thousands gathered to pay their respects.

"Up to now the riot police had an image of toughness," said Capt. Michiko Nakanishi, the 53-year old head of the new unit.

"But nowadays they have to be more than that. There are demonstrations by the handicapped, elderly, women and other groups for which the riot police are a bit too much. There are more and more duties for which women are better suited than men."

The women's "Special Mobile Force," more popularly known as the female riot squad, was selected from the ranks of the 1,523 policewomen in the department.

With an average age of 21½ and two to three years' experience in the police force, the women meet as a unit twice a month for training in team work and crowd-control tactics.

The male unit trains full-time.

For the most part, the policewomen continue their duties in the 94 police stations throughout Tokyo, usually in the traffic department, and attend the required twice monthly lessons in the martial art of aikido.

"Their training is mostly in announcing and communication. Over a microphone or megaphone, a woman's voice sounds softer and is more effective than a man's," said Capt. Nakanishi.

"Rather than listen to what I was saying, they stared at me, which was embarrassing," said Keiko Domon, 20, of her work at orderly demonstrations on May Day.

"But whenever a male and female officer are standing together, people always come to the woman if they have a question," she added.

Even as members of a special police squad, the women officers, like Japanese office girls everywhere, serve tea to their male co-workers.

"We feel it's something we have to do, so we don't think whether it's good or bad," said Miss Domon.

We think we are equal to the men, but serving tea is a traditional way of expressing feminity so we do it naturally," said Mrs. Nakanishi.

Ex-Con Gives Students Prison-Life Lowdown

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Hatred and bitterness towards the penal system where he spent 6½ years has motivated ex-convict Fred Nash to tell his story to law class students at Cornwall Collegiate and Vocational Institute.

Once described by a prosecutor as the leader of "a white-collar Matia" for his role as head of a slick bad-cheque ring, Nash lectures on the real story of prison life.

"I point out to them how goddamn good they got it and not to jeopardize it. I'm sure that if there is any guy sitting in the back row of that class thinking of robbing a drug store that night, he'll go two blocks out of his way to miss it on the way home from school after listening to me."

Nash, 34, was invited to teacher Mark Goldhamer's classes after one of his students, who knew Nash, suggested he come and talk about prison life.

The class had heard from judges, lawyers and police but Nash is popular with the students.

"The way he talks," said Robert Childerhouse, 18, "it sounds like prison is more corrupt than society. It should be changed to correct, rather than hurt, them."

Whether they agree with him or not, the students would like to hear from Nash again.

"If I had my choice, we'd have him back again and send him to other schools as well. He is really good because he has something new to say every time," said Suzan Crawford, 16.

Nash has spent more than five months at one time in solitary confinement and still bears the scars from a beating, after which he says, guards left him lying for four hours in his own blood on the cell floor with a broken arm.

He said his lectures are motivated by hate and bitterness because "everywhere I go, if I look for it, I can find broken men wandering around because of prison."

The prison system does not rehabilitate but rather destroys and teaches the prisoner he must "con and manipulate people" in order to survive, Nash said.

"If you're not a fast con and can skate faster than the next guy, you die. I've seen my friend hang himself; good men take (drug) overdoses and good men become shells.

"All they are doing is turning out broken men and the biggest sham of all is that those suckers out there—the taxpayers—are emptying their pockets to pay for this."

Nash answers students' questions on homosexuality in prison, the guerrilla warfare between prisoners and guards, the stabbings and lead-pipe assaults.

His life of forging cheques started small in the Maritimes but before long he was stealing up to $10,000 a week in Toronto as head of a white-collar fraud and phoney cheque ring.

He was sentenced in April, 1970 after pleading guilty to 93 charges of fraud, conspiracy, forgery and possession of stolen cheques.

Since his release on parole in 1974, life has changed for Nash. He is the owner, with his wife, of a billiard lounge. He and his wife, Anne, recently won $100,000 in a Wintario draw.

Makarios Successor Chosen

NICOSIA (AP) — The main Greek-Cypriot political parties, ranging from Conservative to Communist, chose Acting President Spyros Kyprianou today as their common candidate to succeed the late Archbishop Makarios as president of Cyprus.

Their action ensures that he will remain the Cypriot head of state at least until February, when Makarios' five-year term expires.

Kyprianou will be proclaimed president automatically as an unopposed candidate Aug. 31, if, as is expected, no independent candidate decides to run. Otherwise a byelection will be held Sept. 10.

After his term ends, there will be another election for a five-year term, and this one is expected to be contested.

Kyprianou, who served as Makarios' foreign minister from 1960 to 1972, is the leader of the right-of-centre Democratic party and president of the Greek-Cypriot House of Representatives. He became acting president of the war-divided island when Makarios died of a heart attack Aug. 3.

Kyprianou's party is the largest in the House, with 21 out of 35 seats under a formula worked out with its coalition partners, the Cyprus Communist party and the Edek Socialist party.

N. Korea Bans Japanese Fish Boats

TOKYO (CP) — North Korea has apparently banned all Japanese fishing boats from within its 200-mile economic zone, the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency said today.

A spokesman said the 50-ton squid fishing boat Shinyo-Maru No. 1 was ordered out of the zone Thursday by a North Korean navy ship.

The Japanese vessel returned home today and crew members said they were told by loudspeaker from the North Korean ship to "get out of our fishery zone quickly; if you enter it again, we shall not forgive you."

The sailors said they were told the ban applied to all Japanese fishing craft.

"We interpret the warning as a ban on entering or navigating within the North Korean zone," a maritime agency spokesman said.

North Korea imposed the 200-mile economic zone on Aug. 1, but made no public statement explaining rules for foreign ships operating within the area.

THIEVES' PIGEON A DECOY

RHYL, Wales (UPI) — A group of women and children walked into a jewelry shop, opened a cardboard box and out flew a pigeon.

While the shop's two clerks scurried around trying to get the fluttering bird, the women picked up rings worth $1,200, caught the pigeon and walked out.

"I have never heard of this trick before," said a police spokesman. "Neither have other forces we have contacted."

Potato Promotion Pays Off

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — A recent promotional campaign in central Canada for the Prince Edward Island potato has proven successful for the island industry, marketing officials say.

The promotion, a joint project of the island potato marketing board and the island market development centre, sought to increase the province's share of the potato market in Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal.

Officials of the two agencies recently reported increased sales in the three areas.

The most beneficial result of the advertising and promotional campaign, however, was acquisition of contacts in the food industry that may be more valuable in future years.

Don Anderson, general manager of the marketing board, said in an interview the joint project was so successful that another is planned for the 1977-78 crop year.

"The industry is very enthusiastic with the results of the first promotion. We have made a good start but we cannot sit back and reflect on our successes. There is still much to be done."

Super Mice, Sexy Rats Running Wild

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rodent control officers in the Vancouver area are worried about "super mice" that are immune to more common types of mouse poison and "super rats" that, judging by their breed's proliferation, have super sexual powers.

"Mice have become a real problem this year," says Bert Hampton, rodent control officer for the Vancouver health department. "many have developed an immunity to ordinary anti-coagulant poisons. I'm not sure if you would call them super mice, but they have developed this resistance."

He said a different and more effective poison, commonly known as alpha kill, is difficult to obtain because of high demands.

Calvin Higo, public health inspector at Richmond, south of here, said he and his colleagues "are only just keeping up with the rats right now."

"We're not making much headway," he remarked, "so we've hired another person to help until January and hopefully he'll stay until next summer."

Higo said it's hard to estimate the number of rats but they abound in ditches, composts, the harbor area, and revel near fruit, fallen from trees. He said two people reported being bitten, but neither injury was serious.

At the Simon Fraser health unit, vector control officer John Nelson said the mice and rat populations are still increasing from levels reported in April.

He said the number of complaints for this year have now increased 34 per cent over the 1975-76 average.

His counterpart in New Westminster, Rod Fraser, said his district is divided by the Fraser River — an abundance of rats in rural Queensborough on Lulu Island, and an abundance of mice in urban New Westminster city.

But the New West mice aren't the super kind. "we haven't found the immunity reported elsewhere," said Fraser.

Frank Hardigan, chief public health inspector at the boundary health unit in Surrey, said his men have been able to beat the increasing mouse and rat populations. But wasps are something else.

"Wasps are certainly more prevalent this year," he said. "Quite a few people have phoned us expressing concern."

Fleas, too, are keeping people hopping.

"They increase if there's a long spell of hot, dry weather," Fraser said, although he doubted the infestation is much more than in other years.

Bumper Tourist Year Seen

McCARTHY

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy predicted Friday that 1977 will be a bumper year for tourism in B.C.

McCarthy said recent statistics show that compared to the same period last year the number of tourists is up by varying percentages throughout the province, that motel occupancy is up 8.9 per cent, restaurant sales have increased 11.8 per cent and beverage sales are up 20.1 per cent.

McCarthy's news release, however, didn't mention that last year the Olympics were being held in Montreal, the U.S. was celebrating its Bicentennial, or that in 1976, the Canadian dollar was valued above U.S. currency. It was one of the worst tourism years ever, experienced in B.C.

The minister said in comparison to a year ago travel information inquiries at Tourism B.C. centres are up 20 per cent; the daily count of counter traffic at the Victoria Information Centre is up 10 per cent, and 10 per cent more visitors from overseas countries have arrived in the province.

Said the minister who recently issued thousands of "Smile" buttons to tourist industry personnel: "This could be the start of a whole new era of growth and prosperity for the tourist industry — currently our billion-dollar industry that enriches the lives of all British Columbians.

"Hospital treatment today is good insurance for 1978 and the years to follow."

Crackdown Annoys Fish Poacher

BELL CROSSING (CP) — Harry, a self-confessed salmon bootlegger and poacher, says that federal fisheries officers in British Columbia are over-reacting in their latest crackdown on poachers.

The 35-year-old native Indian, who makes his living in the summer poaching and selling salmon, said in an interview that the officers are "carrying guns and using dogs and they're harassing us."

He said the poachers, nearly all of whom are indains, will continue to sell or trade salmon despite moves by the federal government to increase maximum fines to $2,000 from $1,000 on Sept. 1.

Indians are permitted to fish between 6 p.m. Thursday and 6 p.m. Sunday for their own consumption. Selling or trading the fish is illegal.

But Harry said he fishes on closed days and sells salmon to middlemen. He said he doesn't know the name of the middlemen, but they are always white.

"We get $3 a fish which generally weighs between five and 12 pounds. The middlemen get about $10 — that's where the big profit is."

Fisheries officials say that the middlemen transport the salmon to markets in the Vancouver area, the Prairies, the United States and possibly Europe. Two such middlemen were fined $700 each on Monday in Edmonton.

Harry said that he catches about 20 fish a night or about 100 a week at this spot on the Fraser River north of Hope. He believes there are about 30 poachers in the 25-mile stretch of the Fraser River between Yale and Hope.

The fisheries department claims that poachers are catching hundreds of thousands of salmon and are jeopardizing future abundance of the fish.

"I catch abut 20 a night whereas one seiner will get up to 200 in one hour," Harry said. "If we're jeopardizing the industry, what are the commercial fishermen, the Russians and Japanese factory ships doing? We're hardly scratching the surface yet we get called criminals."

He said there is a simple solution to the problem — the federal government should allow natives to sell or trade salmon.

"That would eliminate the middlemen who makes all the money and customers would get cheaper fish — red spring is selling in the stores for $3.99 per pound whereas I'd sell a 30-pound spring for about $15," Harry said.

10-Pupil Classes In French

Premier Bill Bennett said Friday that once B.C.'s proposed new core curriculum for French language schools is in place all it will take is a request from 10 students to have a class taught in French.

Bennett hopes the program will be operating by the fall of 1978, providing French language instruction for classes of between 10 and 25 students.

Education Minister Pat McGeer announced the French core curriculum program Thursday, saying it would make it possible "for parents to have a choice of either official language as the language of instruction for their children, regardless of their language background."

Bennett, expanded on that slightly saying "a minimum of 10 and a maximum of 25 could receive instruction in French in any class."

He added that the program will be provided in any school district that demonstrated sufficient interest in having French language instruction.

Bennett denied the proposed French curriculum is a response to a recent letter from Quebec Premier Rene Levesque regarding the instruction of languages in the provinces.

"But I'm sure it will be of interest to Mr. Levesque," said Bennett.

He said French instruction had been one of his government's top three priorities in education.

The other two priorities were to establish an English core curriculum and to provide aid to independent schools.

McGeer announced earlier this week that an English core curriculum will be sent to the school districts later this summer, and the house is now part way through detailed debate on a bill that will provide aid to independent schools.

House Price Split Staggering

VANCOUVER (CP) — Michael Goldberg, an urban land economics professor at the University of B.C., says that much recent discontent with Canadian housing prices stems from comparisons with nearby United States cities.

In a book, Public Property? The Habitat Debate Continued, released Friday, he says that seemingly staggering differences occur, with similar houses costing double or more here than in Seattle, for example.

The book is published by the Fraser Institute, which says it is an independent Canadian economic social research and education organization, with the "objective of redirecting public attention to the role of competitive markets in providing for the well-being of Canadians."

About 15 years ago, U.S. and Canadian housing prices were roughly equivalent, Goldberg says, adding that between 1950 and 1974 the number of U.S. households increased by nearly 65 per cent while Canadian households grew by more than 100 per cent.

Canadians prefer or need more housing closer to urban cores because of a lack of freeway systems, Goldberg says.

He says that between 1960 and 1974 mortgages outstanding in Canada increased six times, while in the U.S. they did not even triple. Despite higher mortgage rates, Canadians were willing to go into debt to buy homes.

Retired Couple Own A Complete Village

BOWLAND BRIDGE, England (CP) — When 64-year-old Harrison Deans and his wife Elizabeth decided to retire to the country, they never thought they would have a whole village to themselves.

They picked the hamlet of Bowland Bridge by the River Winster in the Lake District of Cumbria, northwest England. There are three cottages, a rustic inn and a store. For most of the year, the Deans are the sole residents.

The inn is run by their son-in-law and daughter, Roger and Barbara Nicholson. The store is a grocery, sub-post office, gas station and general supply store all in one and is owned by Bert Lever, 75.

His shop has been likened to an Aladdin's Cave since it is packed with everything from hairpins to garden tools, rare cheeses, canned foods, motor accessories, bicycle tires, paper clips, nails and screws.

Other cottages are occupied by "offcomers" — people who don't live in the area but use the cottages for weekends and vacations. Similar conditions are found in many parts of the English Lake District.

The history of the changing sources of energy is fascinating and makes us realize the tremendous technical progress which has become part of our lifestyle.

The 32-page illustrated booklet "Introduction to Energy in Canada" says that nearly all energy which is available on earth is derived from solar radiation. The only exception is the nuclear energy which is stored in uranium and thorium.

The amount of radiation the earth receives from the sun every day boggles the mind. On the average, each 1½ square miles of the earth's surface get the heat equivalent of a Hiroshima-type atomic bomb.

The booklet traces the development of our original energy sources, such as wood, wind and water. It then examines the advantages and disadvantages of present energy sources. In addition to water, these include coal, oil natural gas, and uranium.

Coal is still widely used in two areas, namely to generate electric power and to produce iron and steel. It is estimated that on a world-wide basis, coal supplies will last for several hundred years.

Whereas coal was the leading fuel in the 18th and 19th centuries, it has now largely been replaced by petroleum. The booklet predicts that after the turn of the century, nuclear power will provide more than half of the world's energy needs. It also tells you how Canada hopes to provide for her future energy needs.

Sad Memories Stirred by Fire

elizabeth forbes

Mention, earlier this week, of the Government House fire in 1957, as one that paralleled — in terms of monetary loss — the recent Ogden Point docks holocaust, brought back memories.

Early on the morning of April 15, 1957, on my way to work, I stopped my car on Fairfield Road to watch, for a minute or so, that long-ago fire.

And as light blazed for a last time in the windows of Government House, flames licked at the vine-covered turrets, and smoke shrouded the mellowed walls, I remember there were tears in my eyes.

It wasn't a large building as official residences go. It only contained 30 main rooms. But in those rooms much of British Columbia's history had unfolded the dignity of protocol was maintained and the hand of friendship extended by succeeding lieutenant-governors and their ladies.

Looking back now I can see the great entrance hall gay with flowers, in season, and brilliant with lights from two tall trees placed on either side of the fireplace at Christmas time.

I remember the long wings that stretched both ways from the entrance hall where life-size paintings of lieutenant-governors were displayed.

A short time before the fire, the late Frank Mackenzie Ross, then in residence, discovered two former incumbents were missing and he had their portraits painted and placed with the others.

There was the state drawing room where, as women's editor of this newspaper, I watched visiting dignitaries from other countries, Canada's leaders, and thousands of British Columbians pass through receiving lines.

Today, in memory, I can see the late Princess Mary, aunt of Queen Elizabeth II, as she welcomed members of the women's services, at a friendly morning ceremony in that room.

I can visualize the great white and gold fireplace where an historic picture was taken when Lieutenant-Governor Ross took office.

Three former lieutenant-governors and their wives were present, the Wallaces, the Banks and the Hambers.

I remember that Mrs. Ross had re-arranged the furniture in that drawing room shortly before the fire "to make it more friendly", as she told me.

And I can almost hear Lieutenant-Governor Ross, as he informed me in his Scottish accented voice, that he had renamed the drawing room as the "British Columbia Room."

Also to create the necessary British Columbia touch paintings of coast and woodland scenes by well-known local artists, had been added.

As I drove on to work that fateful morning, flames were reaching into the pillared ballroom with its arched balconies, red-carpeted orchestra dais, heavy crimson drapes and gold and green velvet couches and chairs.

Many times I had listened to Len Acre's orchestra playing from that crimson-covered dais, as visitors and Victorians danced on the gleaming polished floor.

I had seen that room filled with blind citizens at what was to be the last annual Christmas party for them before the fire. I had joined in a "ring-around-a-rosy" as children from the Victoria Protestant Orphanage were entertained during that same Yuletide.

There was a day, soon after the end of the Second World War, when I watched Hon. Charles Banks and Mrs. Banks welcome and present the King's honors to a great throng of Canadians, in that room.

A night, too, when four small children in pyjamas and dressing gowns raced wildly along the balcony of that ballroom, and at the invitation of the late Hon. W. C. Woodward, then lieutenant-governor, come tumbling down the winding stairway to play the drums as the orchestra tuned up for a ball.

They were the three children — now well into their adult years — of Viscount Alexander of Tunis, Governor-General of Canada, and Lady Alexander, also a small girl who was travelling with them.

At that ball, 63 debutantes from Victoria and Vancouver made their formal bows to the Governor-General.

There was the state dining room where, shortly before the disastrous fire new hangings were arranged to match the deep gold of the carpets and the colorings of the walls.

Phyllis Ross as Government House Chatelaine at the time of the disastrous fire.

Mrs. Ross had taken a personal pride in sending to England for the lovely brocaded material (a copy of hangings in one of the old castles) and in seeing that material made into drapes.

In the present Government House, the main hall, east and west wings, drawing room, ballroom and dining room, are in the same positions they held in the old mansion. Other rooms however, have been changed in position and in size and shape.

Looking back I can see Lieutenant-Governor Ross' private office in the west wing, and the fine set of original prints that hung on the walls.

Mrs. Ross's sitting room was at the end of the west wing and an office adjoining for her secretary, the late Miss Ruth MacLean.

From that sitting room a door led to a glassed-in sunroom filled with flowering plants. Morning of the fire flames licked around those plants and the leaves curled and died.

I look back to the office of the private secretary in the old Government House and the priceless records that were housed in the rows of filing cabinets. Records that can never be replaced.

I think, too, of a series of hand-painted plaques showing crests of the provinces of Canada, that are forever lost to us.

They were painted by the late Capt. J. G. Cromack, private secretary to a number of lieutenant-governors, and they were above the dark panelled fireplace in the state dining room.

As I write I can see again the dapper figure of Capt. Cromack, in morning coat and striped trousers . . . a daily uniform as far as he was concerned.

He painted the plaques as a work of love for Government House and all it represented to him.

"It is Government House that stands for the Crown in Canada," he told me on one occasion.

"We must keep it up to standard. We must never lose the traditions we have established within these walls."

The disastrous fire of April 15, 1957, did destroy those walls but the traditions live on in the present Government House.

DOG BOWLED OVER BY HEAT

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Why is it some dogs are bothered so much more by the heat than others? Our Cinnamon hardly moves on a hot day. She just lies around in the shade, panting and drinking water.

DEAR H.C.: Cinnamon cools it as best a canine can: Plenty of water to replace that lost during the panting process, keeping out of the blazing direct sun, and minimizing exercise which quickly sends internal body temperatures soaring. On a critically hot day you can soak her to the skin, though cooling by evaporation is less effective for a dog than for a person. Breeds which handle heat have a light, short coat, are lean and have a clear, unobstructed airway so they can transfer the maximum amount of air from the lungs with the minimum effort.

Long-haired, heavy-coated dogs should seldom be clipped completely, but thinning the coat can help reduce its heat-holding properties. Little can be done for those breeds with shortened noses and narrowed throats (boxers and bulldogs to Pekes and pugs); except to be aware they do have breathing difficulties and to be sure they have all the help you can provide in keeping them calm, quiet, and cool during a long hot summer.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Once I was the driver, once I was a passenger, when cats were struck because there was simply no way to avoid them. Both times the cats were unconscious when they were rushed in to the hospital. I've wondered since, is carrying such an animal in a blanket (if you have one) the best way to handle it? — S.N.

DEAR S.N.: Next best. The struck cat (or dog) which is unconscious, or nearly so, is best handled by sliding it gently onto a flat, rigid surface, plywood, for instance. This kind of stretcher protects the spinal column. The animal's head (and tongue) should be extended straight out in line with the spine to reduce upper airway obstruction. Covering the patient is advisable in all but the hottest weather, to reduce heat loss.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've had rats under our house and I've been using warfarin which, I understand, is safe to use around dogs. I just read somewhere, though, that rats are getting immune to warfarin. Should I use something else on them and, if so, what wouldn't hurt dogs? — T.N.

DEAR T.N.: While there are strains of rats that have developed resistance to warfarin, most are still susceptible to it. Scientists, who are constantly presented with new toxic products in the laboratory, should come up with warfarin substitutes as required. Note that warfarin is not safe to use around pet animals — it's only safer than many other poisons previously (and sometimes still used to kill rats. Warfarin can and does occasionally cause fatal internal hemorrhage in cats and dogs, so it cannot be used where these animals have access to it, nor should this poison be used where numbers of dead of dying rats might in turn be found or caught and eaten by animals.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I'm writing this letter to admit that Bonzo, our dog, is a bed wetter. Would you have any idea why, I hope?

DEAR E.A.: Pooch piddling problems (involuntary) can be caused by one or more of many factors. Age, sex, environment (including psychological stress and others) must be considered. In adult dogs, one of the more common causes is cystitis (bladder infection), which will usually respond to appropriate antibiotics. Bonzo's best hope in having his particular problem diagnosed and treated is his veterinarian.

KNIT AND CHAT

FASHION PUTS FINGER ON THIMBLES AGAIN

By MAY E. MACLEAN

The urge to collect things is truly an instinctive part of human nature and especially so with women. Collecting — and there is truly no limit to the kind of things you can collect — is both fun and rewarding. Of the various collecting hobbies that woman engage in these days, thimble collecting has become a favorite.

Thimbles have been around for centuries and may be as old as the human race itself? It can surely be assumed that the very first thimble may have been nothing more than a piece of animal hide, used by a cave woman or man, to protect the fingers and hand while using a fish or small animal bone as a needle or awl to lace skins together.

Chinese women and men seemed to have used some type of open thimble from the days of the Great Wall was built, right down to today. Egyptian women and Greek and Roman seamstresses used thimbles. Archeological digs in many countries have unearthed bronze and metal thimbles, many of which are displayed in museums.

As hand stitching became more and more a woman's job, special thimbles were made for woman. These were smaller in size and daintier in design. Thimbles became favorite and fashionable gift items.

Paul Revere, an accomplished silversmith who is better known for his midnight ride, is said to have made thimbles for his daughter, his wife and for his customer's wives. Wealthy men had beautiful silver and gold thimbles made as gifts. These were often set with semi-precious stones and decorated with intriciate engravings.

To give a keepsake thimble became the vogue in the 18th and 19th centuries, and has again become the fashion today.

Expensive souvenir and commemorative thimbles, showing scenes of towns and events, became popular gifts at the turn of this century as men started to travel away from home on longer business trips. What better way to show his wife that he thought fondly of her and her needlework while away from home, than to bring back a beautiful souvenir thimble.

Historic events, especially those of interest to women were soon incorporated into the design of the thimble. If you like to visit antique shops as I do, you may come across a find.

Nudey Games Disturb

DEAR ABBY: We are the parents of two boys, ages 6 and 7. A very sweet 14-year-old neighbor girl babysits for us. She's always been very reliable, and the boys adore her.

Several nights ago the 6-year-old told me that the sitter said they could stay up an hour past their bedtime if they took off their clothes and ran through the house naked. He said they refused and went to bed. The 7-year-old confirmed the story and added a few more disturbing details.

I know that kids sometimes make up things, but after I explained the seriousness of their accusations, they assured me they were telling the truth.

It's hard to believe this girl would do something like this, but what do I do now? Should I talk to her mother? She's a nice woman and would probably be shocked and hurt, but she'd want to know if this were true.

Or should I talk to the girl? I can't have her babysit again thinking something might happen to my sons. I don't want to hurt anyone unnecessarily, but children must be protected.—PERPLEXED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Talk to the girl, not in a judgmental or accusatory way, but as a concerned mother who doesn't want her sons involved in further nudey games. You could also use this incident to impart some badly needed elementary sex education to a young girl who is naturally curious.

DEAR ABBY: What in your opinion is the most important ingredient in a successful party?—THE HOSTESS WITH THE MOSTEST

DEAR MOSTEST: People! It's not what you put on the TABLE, it's what you put on the CHAIRS that makes a good party.

DEAR ABBY: I've been living with Larry for 14 months. We get along perfectly except when I bring up the subject of marriage. He says, "Maybe someday, but not now!"

When we decided to live together it was supposed to be a "trial" to see if we got along well enough to get married. I think we've passed the test, but apparently Larry still isn't sure. He doesn't even want to get officially engaged.

I am 19 and he is 25. I was married for two years, and I'm sure we could make a marriage work.

Should I drop the subject, or should Larry give me a date?—WANTS MARRIAGE

DEAR WANTS: If Larry doesn't give you a date, drop the subject AND also Larry.

Old Age and Memory

your health

My mother is 82 and in remarkably good health. She is not as distressed as we are by the fact that she can't remember a thing. Is old age the only cause for this? — Mrs. J. S. A.

Dear Mrs. A.:

It is not old age itself. People who live to such an age have a greater chance of developing narrowing of the arteries due to arteriosclerosis. This produces a diminished flow of blood and oxygen to the brain.

The memory centre is one of the parts of the brain that is affected by the inadequate blood supply.

I'm certain that you have noticed that your mother can clearly recall things that happened when she was a child. Yet her memory for recent events is markedly impaired. This is characteristic of the condition. It takes an enormous amount of understanding, consideration and patience to deal with such a loss of memory in a parent.

It can become irritating to have to repeat the same instructions, only to find that they are forgotten within minutes after they have been elaborately given.

A patient of mine complained bitterly about this very same problem with her father. The poor fellow was bombarded by anger that he hardly deserved. Remember that your mother has no control over this disability.

Many reports from all over the world are slowly creeping into the scientific literature about methods for reestablishing lost memories. Drugs are being used with a moderate amount of success.

These are sufficient to encourage further research which, we hope, will eventually relieve this handicap.

Our doctor prescribes a teaspoon of medicine three times a day and when I give it to my four-year-old son I lose half of it on his chin. How can I tell if he gets a proper dose! — Mrs. B. U.

Dear Mrs. U.:

Many parents are indebted to Dr. William Sohn, of Pennsylvania, who suggested a very clever way to be sure infants and young children get the proper amount of medicine.

He advises the use of a medicine dropper held in the corner of the mouth. Gently pull the cheek out a bit and pour. Be sure the stopper is made of plastic and not glass. There's always the possibility that the child will bite down.

For tiny infants, the medicine can be put in a nipple. The infant thus gets the entire dose.

GARDENING
jack beastall

The most frequently asked question over the past week or so is for the date when onion tops should be bent over.

It may be just a coincidence that many gardeners are growing onions for the first time this year and have heard from someone that the tops must be bent over "if you want the onions to grow."

Whatever the cause of so many gardeners asking the question, let us look at it as it is usually phrased; "When is the date that onion tops have to be bent over?"

The wording implies that the job is done on a certain calendar date. There are no calendar dates for doing any form of gardening.

The calendar was devised by man, and while it controls his movements and programs, it has never been recognized by nature.

The seasons come and go in order, and the incidence of insects follows a law of cycles. Spring does not automatically appear on the 21st of March, nor does winter await the 21st of December.

There are periods during which certain gardening practices are best performed, but the actual date the work will be done is in the hands of nature. It must await suitable weather, temperature, and soil conditions, and these vary from year to year and from garden to garden.

We could well ask, why bend over onion tops? We don't bend over the foliage of carrots or beets, so why interfere with the foliage of onions?

To find the answer we have to study the onion and its soil requirements, its response to weather conditions, and the culture needed to make a success of onion growing in our particular locality.

Limited space prevents going into the whole subject, but a hint or two on culture may help.

Soil for onions must be rich in humus and finely pulverized. Manure may be applied for a crop the previous season, but never immediately before sowing onion seed.

The best crops come from transplanted onion seedlings, not from seed sown where the plants are to mature.

When transplanting, the strongest seedlings are used and only the roots set into the soil. To bury any portion of the seedling stem results in thickening of the necks, which in turn delays ripening and lessens storage life.

Far more important than interfering with the foliage is keeping the onion bulbs above soil throughout their growth, and making sure no soil is piled against the bulbs during cultivation periods.

Where did this idea of bending over onion tops originate, and why?

The answer appears in an old seed catalog of Sutton and Sons (England, published as a bound volume around the 1890's, and outlining the culture of all their vegetable and flower seeds on every continent of the world.

In regard to onions, it states:

"To ensure perfect ripening of the onion bulb in the British Isles and throughout Western Europe it is necessary to arrest growth by bending over the tops, breaking the fibres in such a way as to limit the supply of food.

"This is only necessary in climates subject to frequent summer rainfall; in the drier summer climate of other parts of the world the same result should be obtained by withholding all water when the bulb has made its full growth."

As far as local gardens are concerned they definitely classify as being "in the drier summer climate of other parts of the world" where bending of onion tops is not necessary.

When onion seed is sown outdoors in a small prepared bed by late October to early November, or in a pot in the greenhouse during February, the crop should ripen here by approximately mid-July.

A late cool spring may push the ripening time along into early August, while a warm early spring will give a crop ready to harvest in early July.

The biggest problem in local home gardens comes from growing onions amongst other vegetable crops. We often find onions and carrots in alternate rows because the onions are believed to mask the smell of the carrots and deter the carrot rust-fly.

Yet the onion stores moisture in its bulb and requires only one-third the amount of water needed to grow good carrots. The onions are therefore grossly overwatered and cannot ripen at normal time.

Once the onion bulb reaches full size for the type being grown, and types vary from one to five inches in diameter, it will start to ripen providing no more water reaches its roots.

Any water reaching it, either artificial application or a rain shower, will cause growth to start again, making bulges in the bulb where the new growth ruptures the already partially hardened scales, increase the diameter of the neck as new leaves push upwards, delay ripening, and cause storage troubles.

Over the years, rain showers have been frequent here around the end of August and the beginning of September, and old time gardeners make a point of having their onions ripened and lifted by mid-August.

When caught unawares by a summer shower at this time of year, a shovel or spade is used to cut the onion roots on one side of the row, or the bulbs of the large types are pushed from one side and then from the other to break most of the roots. This prevents the bulbs from getting an overdose of water.

Cracking the fibres of the foliage by bending it sharply, cutting the roots with a spade, or pushing the bulbs from side to side to break the roots, are ways of limiting the supply of food as suggested in the catalog.

As long as we grow vegetables in a small area and have lawns, shrubs, perennials and trees nearby which need water during July and early August, it is impossible to prevent the soil moisture from reaching the onion roots.

And if water, either from overhead or under ground, reaches onion roots during their ripening period, we shall continue to have problems with the crop, and have to devise ways and means of overcoming the problems according the conditions existing in each garden.

If onions can be grown successfully in the frequent summer rains of England and Western Europe, we can do the same here by watching where we plant and how we spread the water.

★ Work For Week

Propagate brambles — logans, blacks and similar, by pegging down the tips of new canes into a mound of sandy compost.

Young plants of winter cabbage, kale and savoy can still go into prepared good soil. See that they are shaded from hot sun until new roots form, and receive enough water. Use lime in each planting hole to prevent clubroot disease; and plant firm.

Cuttings of zonal geraniums and fuchsias root easily at this time and make fine flowering plants next spring. But they must have frost-free overhead light available for winter. A cool greenhouse is ideal so that too much growth is not encouraged.

Check chrysanthemums and dahlias for staking and tying. Winds may develop at the same time fall rains begin. The combination spells disaster to heavy flower heads.

Water peony roots for last time, applying a handful of bonemeal to each plant before the deep watering.

Rousing Reception For Indira

NEW DELHI (AP) — Former prime minister Indira Gandhi, said to be seeking a political comeback after her defeat in a general election last March, was enthusiastically received today during a visit to northern India.

India's national news agency said the Mrs. Gandhi, 59, addressed a large crowd of followers when she arrived for a brief stopover in Lucknow, the capital of her home state of Uttar Pradash.

Later, Mrs. Gandhi received a "rousing reception" when she arrived at Patna airport, 535 miles southeast of here, for a visit to backward areas in the state of Bihar, the report said.

She was met at the airport by Congress officials and state Gov. Jagannath Kaushal, appointed while Mrs. Gandhi was in power.

The former prime minister was expected to meet in Patna on Sunday with Jayaprakash Narayan, the 74-year-old opposition leader who led a movement to oust Mrs. Gandhi from power.

THE SHORT CUT TO FILM-MAKING

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — Doing short films is a great way to get started in filmmaking, says Don Humphries, secretary-treasurer of the Yorkton International Film Festival.

"Anyone who's in feature films now has done time doing shorts," said Humphries. With shorts, costs are relatively low and filmmakers can keep creative control.

He said among Canadian directors, Don Shebib, who made Goin' Down the Road, and Allan King, director of Who Has Seen the Wind? and A Married Couple, both began with shorts.

The last contest, in 1975, attracted 204 entries from around the world. This year the festival is scheduled Oct. 11-15 and about 300 films are expected to be entered.

Entries, in 16 mm. or Super-8 mm., must be received by Aug. 1 and must run 60 minutes or less. Categories range from animation and experimental to travel and television.

A total of 17 awards are given. In 1975, Barry Greenwald's film Metamorphosis was chosen as the best entry by an amateur. It later captured an award at the Cannes Film Festival.

The top prize, the Golden Sheaf, goes to the film chosen as the best in the entire festival. The name was suggested by the late Frank Morriss, a Winnipeg entertainment writer who was a judge of Yorkton's first festival in 1956.

A selection committee prescreens all the entries and weeds out the clinkers, leaving the panel of three judges —a performer, a critic and a filmmaker—with perhaps 200 films to view.

Humphries said there is a strong push this year to get distributors to attend the festival, along with writers and filmmakers. He said movie distribution in Canada is tightly controlled and Canadian shorts have trouble getting into theatres.

String Artists in Mendelssohn Octet

On Sunday the final gala concert in the B.C. International Festival will feature on its program a celebrated piece of music which only the presence of eight outstanding string players makes it possible to perform. It will take place at McPherson Playhouse at 8 p.m.

It is the string Octe by Mendelssohn, a difficult and beautiful work which the players have been rehearsing extensively on campus over the past two weeks.

The artists include the string portion of the Quartetto Beethoven di Roma, Japanese cellist Hakuro Mori, Canadian musicians Yuri Mazurkevich, violinist, and Leslie Malowany, cellist, and two outstanding student artists — violinists Chantal Juillet and Angela Cavadas.

MAZURKEVICH
. . . Franck sonata

In addition the lovely romantic Rachmaninoff cello and piano sonata will be performed by Harvey Shapiro with Robin McCabe, and the Caesar Franck violin sonata by Dana Mazurkevich and William Aide.

Three more concerts remain in the series and they will take place on the St. Michael's campus, Richmond Road. Tuesday's will feature two Canadian singers and Gary Karr with Harmon Lewis in a Hindemith sonata for double bass and piano. Karr will also join Phyllis Mailing, mezzo soprano, in a work to be announced. The other singer is the splendid baritone Roland Richard, who will perform Schumann's Dichterliebe with Denise Masse at the piano.

Thursday's program will highlight the Brahms E flat major sonata for viola and piano with Malowany and McCabe, and on Aug. 23 there will be given the Canadian premiere of the Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody by violinist Ruggiero Ricci, who will also play Beethoven's G major sonata. Robin McCabe will be the pianist. All concerts begin at 8 p.m.

NEW WORKS FOR BASTION

A season of premieres has been announced by Bastion Theatre's artistic director Ed Stephenson, to be staged through the fall and winter at McPherson Playhouse. It will open with a world premiere — an ambitious play by Victoria writer Ron Chudley entitled After Abraham. This will open on Oct. 7.

"Envision the battle on the Plains of Abraham," says Stephenson, "with the personalities of General Wolfe and Montcalm, then take it one step further to a meeting of the two in the most congenial of situations.

"At a time when Canada is faced with a serious threat to its national unity, After Abraham might give West Coasters a sense of bilingualism, biculturism and the possible thoughts of two men who were among the pioneers of our country."

A Canadian premiere will follow in November. The Runner Stumbles in the story of a priest accused of murdering a nun. A thriller in the Hitchcock mode, it's a play of love, passion and religion, according to Stephenson.

West Coast premieres of a comedy, The Girl in the Freudian Slip, which will bracket the Christmas season; the English hit, Comedians, and another Canadian play, Maxine Fleischman's And Nothing But . . . carry the season through February and March. Montreal Star critic Myron Galloway called Fleischman's play his personal choice for the best Canadian play seen in Montreal during 1975.

Bastion's season subscription tickets are now available and may be ordered by phone or by dropping in to the office at 1002 Wharf.

Festival on Our Doorstep

audrey johnson

What is more satisfactory to the ego of the bearer of tidings than to have his audience — be it one or 10 — rivetted and astonished by his news. That's why few people can resist the urge to repeat a choice piece of news, preferably scandalous or at least dramatic.

But how much more surprising to find that a subject not news to you as the discourser gets the same kind of reaction from listeners. That's been my experience several times in the last two or three weeks whenever I began talking about the B.C. International Festival and the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts; dropped jaws, widened eyes.

As you read those words do you have a detailed knowledge of what it's all about? You've heard of it — right? Maybe you know it's something that has been happening in Victoria over the past three years — or is it at Shawnigan?

Do you have any idea what it means to this city? What it could mean without too much effort on our part over the next five years?

How, like a stone dropped in a pool, expanding waves would lap the whole island and the province itself in a short time? That it would be the one and only of its kind in the Pacific Northwest?

A summer performing arts festival for this city has been talked about on and off for years. There has never been a dissenting voice as to the suitability of this area for such a festival. Visitors from other parts of North America and the world have acclaimed it as ideal, and wondered why a festival was not already established here.

The answer has lain with the lack of a key person as organizer and the daunting prospect of finances. Those who might have explored the idea at one time were frightened off by the fact that Vancouver which promoted a festival in 1958, which cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, accumulated a debt it was unable to disperse in succeeding years.

From that experience those of us who held onto the dream learned that in most instances it is better to let such an event grow from a beginning that is high in quality but modest in scale. At the same time we have never doubted the positive economic value to any area where a festival of this calibre has become established.

Hundreds of thousands of people have flocked to Stratford, Ont. over the years, spending millions of dollars there. How many heavy-there. How many heavy-spending summer visitors would the little town have had without the lure of the festival? Or take Edinburgh, Salzberg, Berkshire, Adelaide, in fact the site of any world-class festival. The story is the same.

And the eye-popping news I have been passing around? The fact that Victoria is already with no effort on our part, the site of a world-class festival. The only trouble is that up to now it's been the best-kept secret around. No one knows about it — not the city and most of the citizens and officials, not the island and not the world.

The festival's modest brochure this spring announced the "B.C. International Festival — Summer '77," offering 16 concerts from July 17 through Aug. 23. It sounded no fanfares but those of us lucky enough to attend the concerts have heard splendid music performed as one might only expect to hear it at Salzberg or Edinburgh or in world capitals.

We in Victoria have been given an incomparable opportunity. There can be few if any cities anywhere that have had a world-class festival handed to them on a silver platter. (Incidentally, the chances of losing it to a mainland resort area are very real, which, if it happens will mean the opportunity has slipped through our fingers not to return in any of our lifetimes.)

Much is written and said concerning developing tourism, considered a lifeline in this non-industrial city. But who so far has attended to the great untapped reservoir of summer travellers to whom china shops, gardens and Olde English atmosphere are no particular lure but who journey every summer to wherever they can hear fine music or experience great theatre?

And how does it come about that we now have the opportunity to develop a channel to that reservoir?

To answer that we go back seven years to the founding by J.J. Johannesen, Belgian-born, Vancouver impresario and arts connoisseur, of a high-prestige international summer school of the arts at Shawnigan Lake Boys School. In the first two years he lured to the school's faculty such renowned artists as Ruggiero Ricci, Janos Starker, Gary Karr and noted European chamber ensembles.

The emphasis then, as now, was on solo and chamber performance.

By the time the school moved to Victoria in 1974, its spin-off, the concerts which inaugurated the international festival had already appeared.

Continuing support from Canada Council, the B.C. Cultural Fund, Air Canada, various foundations and corporations, has permitted the school to essentially subsidize the festival.

This year the school's faculty — and the artists who are performing in the 16-concert series — include the superb cellist and incredibly fine teacher, Harvey Shapiro, whose master classes win raves from the students and are a joy to audit. Shapiro, in Victoria for the second consecutive summer, is regarded so highly that Rostropovich sent his daughter here to study with him last year.

And other artists on the faculty like Grant Johannesen (no relation to J.J.), Ruggiero Ricci, Gary Karr, Abey Simon, Robert Aitken and Phyllis Mailing, are the same ones you will find performing world-wide at major festivals.

The ensemble violins of Yuri and Dana Mazurkevich and the lustre of the Italian Quartetto Beethoven di Roma are experiences unlikely to be surpassed no matter where on this globe you travel. Memory of the Quartetto with double bassist Gary Karr playing Schubert's "Trout" Quintet will be with me as long as memory lasts. It outshone any previous performance of the work, live or recorded, I have ever encountered.

This year the school has 150 students, all highly proficient, many already playing and teaching professionally. They have come from England, Toronto, New York, Los Angeles, Taiwan, China, Japan, Holland and Norway, among other places. During the six weeks session on St. Michael's University Campus, the school and festival invest in the neighborhood of $90,000 in this community, which is not bad but a mere raindrop compared to its potential if the floodgate is opened.

This column is not being written in the hope that something will be done about the situation. Something is already being done by a few concerned citizens working with founder-director Johannesen to insure that next year — providing the silver platter has been filched away from us in the meantime — the International Festival will begin to get the international (as well as the local) attention it deserves.

If there seems to have been rather overmuch talk of profit here it's because, being aware that Greater Victoria is seriously in need of an economic boost, I think that point must be made strongly.

The artists will forgive me if I suggest that a world-class international festival is an industry that has proved itself everywhere else to be an economic bonanza.

Moderate Quake Hits California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Windows broke, dishes rattled and buildings shuddered Thursday night when a moderate earthquake rumbled through southern California from Santa Monica to Santa Barbara. Seismologist James Whitcomb said the tremor's epicentre was just outside of Sylmar, 25 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley.

Sask. Visit Out For Queen

REGINA (CP) — The Queen and Prince Philip will be unable to visit Saskatchewan this year, a spokesman for the lieutenant-governor's office said today.

Premier Allan Blakeney had invited the royal couple to visit the province when they come to Canada as part of a silver jubilee tour. The Queen will open Parliament in October.

The spokesman said all of the Queen's activities during her visit will be in Ottawa and she had informed Saskatchewan officials she would be unable to visit the province this year.

AROUND THE ART GALLERIES

An unusual graphics exhibition is to open at the Maples Gallery Sunday, Aug. 21. The prints, mostly woodcuts, are the work of members of a graphics workshop conducted by internationally known printmaker, Naoko Matsubara.

Mrs. Matsubara has undertaken a pioneering mission to extend the use of the woodcut technique in North America as an alternative to methods emphasizing sophistication and complexity for its own sake.

The artist notes that, with the exception of the mulberry-based paper which she still prefers for printing, all the ingredients for the woodcut are abundant on this continent. Some of her own work will be displayed in the exhibition. Its expressiveness is largely due to the process of direct, intuitive, spontaneous carving of the block which Matsubara advocates and has introduced in the workshop.

Much of the exhibition will consist of portfolios of woodcuts inspired by literary texts of the artists' choice. Among exhibitors are Peggy Arber, Darlene Churcher, Bill Gilbert, Vicky Husband, Mimi Jones, Christine Toller, Kathy Schwanke, and Porfirio Verde.

The exhibition will continue through Sept. 4 at The Maples, corner of West Saanich and Keating Cross Roads.

At the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, starting Monday and continuing through Aug. 26, an exhibition and sale of oils, watercolors, sketches and prints will take place. The artists are Pat Audley, Loreen Chwin, Corinne Molloy, Marilyn Spanier, Josanne Stensby and Sheila Mary Summers.

Entitled Interpretations Art, it is the result of a group trip to Carmel and San Francisco last year. Some of the paintings on display have been developed from another trip down the Alberni Canal to the Vancouver Island west coast.

Viewing hours for the exhibition are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday.

'Big Band Sound' in Park

"Down Memory Lane" is the theme of Sunday's concert at Beacon Hill Park. It will feature the 12-piece Big Band sound of an ensemble under the direction of Chick Webb.

A trombonist of many years experience, Webb's musical background includes a period as a member of the famed Coldstream Guards Band in London. More recently he has been assistant conductor of the Naden Band here.

Sunday's program, which begins at 2:30 p.m., will consist of familiar arrangements of music of the Glen Miller and Tommy Dorsey bands among others. Heard on tenor sax will be Tony Kershaw of Montreal, who is attending the Canadian Forces School of Music at Esquimalt.

Song stylist Muriel Bertrand, who scored a hit earlier this season with the Fred Usher Variety Show, will sing songs from the 40s and 50s as well as her own specialties.

The free concert is presented through co-operation of the City of Victoria, Victoria Musicians Association and Recording Industries Trust Fund.

Gary Karr Soloist With Symphony

Victoria Symphony's summer festival orchestra will be playing two programs in the Cedar Hill Community Centre Sunday. Conductor will be Gordon Munford and the guest artist, courtesy of the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts and the B.C. International Festival, will be famed double bassist Gary Karr.

The concerts are at 2:30 and 3:45 p.m.

Karr will also be soloist with Munford at the Monday sunset concerts in Centennial Square.

American conductor Munford concludes his portion of the outdoor concert series with the Centennial Square Monday-Wednesday-Friday concerts next week. The final eight concerts will be conducted by Timothy Vernon.

Concert at UVic

A small ensemble calling themselves the Summer Winds will give a concert Tuesday at 8 p.m in the University of Victoria's Mac-Laurin Auditorium. The players are Janet Bouey, clarinet; Sheila Stanley, oboe; Judy Allingham, flute, with Geraldine Pugh at the piano.

Music by Telemann, Beethoven, Saint-Saens and Milhaud will be performed.

Health Insurance Premium Income Up

TORONTO (CP) — Premium income from health insurance sales in Canada for 1976 increased by about 23 per cent to $884.5 million from $716.6 million, says the Canadian Association of Accident and Sickness Insurers.

Direct claim payments rose by about 30 per cent to $579.2 million from $446.2 million.

On the basis of direct written premium income measured against direct claims paid, the results indicate an improvement in 1976 less ratio to 65 per cent in 1975, the association said.

Loss-ratio figures measure a company's efficiency in rate making, compared with claims paid out. The higher the ratio, the greater the return to claimants.

A 65-per-cent ratio indicates a compay paid out 65 cents in claims for each $1 premium collected.

4-2 "THE CONTINENTAL QUILT AND DOWN PILLOW SPECIALISTS"

Witch Doctors Continue

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The muffled beat of African tribal drums sounded through the halls of Johannesburg's all-white University of Witwatersrand.

A strong smell of herbs and tree bark wafted through the room of the main library and centuries-old incantations in various native languages were heard everywhere.

It was part of an exhibition staged by the university on the art and craft of the witch doctor and the practices that have ruled the lives of blacks throughout this continent for centuries.

They still play a part in the life of many sophisticated blacks today, both in white-ruled South Africa and black-ruled countries to the north.

Although there are many trained doctors on the continent, many black Africans prefer to put their faith in the medicine of the "mutti," as the witch doctor is known.

In a special symposium at the opening of the exhibition, three local witch doctors took part in a discussion with white medical students on the role of the witch doctor in black society.

But while proving of interest to the medical students, the symposium apparently did little to narrow the gap between Western and tribal African medicine.

"I dont think any patients I will have will be very happy if I throw stones or chant over them while they lie in bed," one student said afterward.

The powers of the witch doctors are beginning to be recognized as effective in certain areas by the white man. But they are little understood.

The craft is a mixture of medicine, psychology and religion. Numerous examples of its success are cited.

The vernacular names of witch doctors vary according to tribal language.

In the southern half of the continent they are mainly known as Sangoma—one who is called to the profession through the voices of an ancestor—or the Inyanga—one who inherits the business from a relative.

But there is also the evil Tagati, who utilizes his herbs and knowledge to kill or cause damage to his enemy—or someone else's enemy if he is paid enough.

"There is evidence that the benevolent witch doctor spends more time in counteracting the evil deeds of the Tagati doctor than in any other matter," said a spokesman at the exhibition.

To weave his evil spells, the Tagati almost always needs human flesh and in 1961 a witch doctor and his assistant were sentenced to death for the murder and mutilation of a woman.

Her hand was found ina cardboard box in the witch doctor's house.

A few years ago, in the Zambian capital of Lusaka, witch doctors were accused of scrabbling for human remains after a train crash in which several people were mangled and killed.

Weddings

Couch — Davis

White daisy mums were beautifully arranged in wrought iron standards, while yellow and green ribbons marked the pews in St. Luke's Church, June 11, 1977, when Archdeacon Charles Wolff officiated at the double-ring ceremony of Diane Elizabeth Davis, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Davis, 1174 Rhoda Lane, and Donald Percy Couch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Couch, Victoria.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was glowing in her mother's wedding gown of white satin, fashioned with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and full skirt. Her filmy veil billowed to the floor from a coronet of miniature calla lilies. A necklace of pearls was her only jewellery. Her bouquet was a cascade of yellow talisman roses, white mums, baby's breath and fern. White streamer ribbons held tiny rosebuds. Matron of Honour, Mrs. Joan Cleghorn, sister of the bride, wore a yellow dress with white daisies, and bridesmaid Melanie Peaty wore a matching gown in pale green. Both carried bouquets of white daisies and baby's breath. The groom wore a black and white tuxedo, and best man, Don McRae, and ushers Ron Holmes and Ross Davis, wore identical tuxedos of grey and black.

The reception was held at the Red Barn where dancing by Candu Music was enjoyed. Don Wharf, cousin of the bride, proposed the toast. The bridal table was covered by a cutwork cloth embroidered by the bride's grandmother. The beautiful three-tiered wedding cake, decorated by Mrs. Irene Oliver, held a pair of kissing angels on the top.

Osborn, Victoria, B.C., became the bride of Donald Bruce Stewart, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart, of Victoria, B.C. Given in marriage by her father, the vows were solemnized by Reverend Clare Holmes.

The petite bride, carrying a bouquet of yellow roses, wore a gown of silk sheer gutpure lace, a high stand-up collar, fitted bodice, raised waist was adorned by lace, the long sleeves were also appliques of lace. A capulet of lace flowers held a veil of illusion tulle, waist length, edged in the matching lace. The groom wore a white tuxedo. Bridesmaids, Michelle Stuyve, of Seattle, Heather Beaton of Toronto, Margot Osborn, sister of the bride, were gowned alike in floor-length primrose yellow gowns, with white flocked bouquets of daisies in an all-over design. They carried white daisies. Carol Muriel Rix, cousin of the bride, was the Maid of Honour. YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT
Number fourteen — Congratulations to all those that helped during the Ogden Point Warehouse fire. We agree with firechief Simmons that Greater Victoria needs a full time arson squad. We would like to ask City Council if it is true that the Victoria Fire Department did not have any salt water pumps to use to fight the fire, and had to use Saanich Fire Department's pumps. Many thanks to Victoria residents that have phoned to ask for and who gave information about certain events in the City of Victoria. Soon we might establish a taxpayers watch on how city council is spending our millions of dollars. Your City's Watchdog requests Saanich and Oak Bay councils not to vote to spend four million dollars rent for a central library. Why not give the taxpaying homeowners the right to vote on a referendum and see where the taxpayers want to spend their taxpaying dollars. Please phone 383-6259, your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards, if you have any information. P.S. Please watch the Blanshard Street, 1300 block.

I'm Stumped
This home is still for sale but only because it's in a different location. This house is a superbly rejuvenated, older, 2-storey home with bs't. The owners have updated all the services, completely redone the interior and turned this into a beautiful home. The patio garden area is private and pleasing. But it's not in a residential area and after many years of work and enjoyment the owners want to move. So now this industrially zoned home would make an excellent office or home and crafts shop; or maybe you want to live closer to town. Call for information on this home priced at $55,000.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BARNES, J. W. — In loving memory of my beloved husband Jack (Friday, August 13th, 1976).
The Fisherman's Prayer
God grant that I may live
To fish until my dying day
And when it comes to my last cast
I then most humbly pray.
When in the Lord's safe landing net
And peacefully asleep,
That in His mercy I may be judged
As "good enough" to keep.
If all the world were ours to give
We'd give, yes and more
To see the face we love so wil
Corn smiling through the door.
—Sadly missed and in our memory always, his loving wife Jean and family.

JUTTA

BARNES, 'Jack' W. — In loving memory of a wonderful brother who left us so suddenly on August 13th, 1976.
The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will to one we loved,
—Sadly missed by Brother Frank, Chris and family.

BARNES — In memory of our Uncle Jack W. Barnes who was taken so suddenly one year ago today, August 13th, 1976.
There is a link death cannot sever,
Love and remembrance last for Love and remembrance last forever.
—Laura and Bruce.

CARR — Dear Dad, though you have passed away our thoughts and memories will always stay.
God gave us a Dad, we loved so much and how we're longing just to touch, his silvery hair on forehead high, Oh God why did he have to die, No matter what mistakes he made, We will cherish his memory in many ways.
—Written by Florence Lowry and ever remembered by Grace Carr, Florence Lowry, Betty Henuset, Grace McCoy and Ted Carr.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Explosive-Maker 'Trained Youths'

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. (AP) — A 22-year-old man was held Friday on charges of helping make and sell explosive devices for $35 each and teaching teen-agers in their use, police said.

Investigators said thaet Audie Ellard and about four other suspects yet to be arrested had exploded 100 home-made bombs in cemeteries, in abandoned vehicles and in fields in McHenry County, northwest of Chicago.

Most of the explosives, they said, appeared to have been used in demonstration exercises for a group of teen-agers being taught on how to handle and make the explosive devises.

Ellard was charged with illegal manufacture, possession and sale of explosives.

Harold Hall, 31, of Crystal Lake, was charged with illegal possession of explosives in connection with a bomb he allegedly bought from Ellard. The bomb charges were brought against Ellard while he was being held on a criminal damage to property charge involving a stolen car.

Police said Hall "bought the bomb for $35 with the intention of blowing up a Fox River Grove police car. He apparently wanted revenge after some previous run-ins with the police there or was going to do it for kicks."

The officer said investigation still is going on and that U.S. government agents are participating. "So far, there is no evidence the bombs were being developed for use by terrorist groups," he added.

Police said Ellard had five to eight teen-agers as young as 14 in his bomb class.

Ellard and Hall were held in McHenry County Jail in Woodstock under bonds of $60,000 and $30,000, respectively, authorities said.

Greater Co-Operation Urged

CALGARY (CP) — A reduction in social ills can best be achieved by co-operation between clergy and lay members of the Anglican Church of Canada, an inter-denominational group said Friday.

In a brief to a church hearing on social responsibility at the church's 28th Synod, the Confederation of Church and Business People said the reduction can best be achieved when both groups jointly recognize several "fundamental facts."

There are 262 delegates at the Synod—both clergy and laity.

"Social progress requires more identification and-or classification of 'evil' situations," said the Confederation, with more than 140 members across Canada.

"It requires complete analyses of causes, effects and practical steps which may be taken to gain over-all improvement. For example, it did not help the population of Uganda to be 'freed' from Britain's empire."

Right Rev. Benoli Ogwal, Bishop of Uganda, said it was unfortunate the Confederation was using the current Ugandan situation and "exploiting it to their own benefit."

"Uganda was under the British for 60 years and we got our independence in 1962 and we had the democratic means of government until 1971 when President (Idi) Amin came into power," Bishop Ogwal said. The bishop now lives in exile in London.

"That was a military government . . . I can say that it involved the British in a way, and that would be even more serious.

"Not only that, but the arms which are being used to kill many Ugandans are not made in the Arab world where President Amin gets his money from, but are made in the western world and the money is used to get them in Uganda."

Bishop Ogwal said the positions taken by the church's public social responsibility unit about South Africa and the issue of oppression of many minority groups were serious ones.

"I'd just like to say the oppressors are not going to be free until the oppressed are free," he said.

The Confederation said the unit's actions and statements have led to disagreement by the church's lay members, adding it felt some of the statements were either "naive or irresponsible."

"We believe the Church has taken some multinational 'postures' based on superficial information and inadequate knowledge of the constituent problems and how to solve them," the Confederation said.

Dr. Randall Ivany, Alberta's ombudsman, and a delegate at the Synod, said the church's social responsibility unit was not working in a spirit of justice because it failed to present both sides of the picture, adding the unit is made up of "vocal and articulate people who would have us believe everyone in authority hates God and the poor."

Ivany said the unit was wrong to voice its criticism of multinational corporations and northern development by using confrontation.

But E. G. Pullen, and a retired manufacturer and unit spokesman, said the unit was not as interested in critizing such countries as South Africa and Chile as it was in dissauding Canadian companies from investing there.

"We have questioned the participation of Canadian enterprise in Southern Africa and in Latin America in a manner which seems to support actually or by implication oppressive regimes," Pullen said.

"We have questioned continuing development in the North before the land claims of the native peoples are settled. It is not the subject of the claims but the fact of negotiation and settlement so that these people have some control over their future."

The synod continues until Aug. 18.

New Gospel Preacher Tells a Grim Message

By BILL CRINDER

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — To preach a new gospel against the sinful energy hog, physicist Alan Johnson is spending a year as a modern-day circuit rider.

At first you might think he was doing a vaudeville turn—out there in front of a pack of kids, leaping and stomping, his sparse locks flopping as he fiddles wildly through a mountain music jig.

Actually, he is on a glum mission.

He is telling high-school students they must change their way of living because the energy shortage may be with them for the rest of their lives.

With his fiddle and jokes, hauling a stage-load of props in a small van, Johnson travels from school to school in Louisiana, putting on energy conservation shows at general assemblies.

"It's the funniest job I have ever had, but I wouldn't want to do it more than a year," he said after an hour-long show in a high-school gymnasium where 1,000 students crowded into bleacher seats.

It is a drastic change from lecturing on solid-state technology, which is what the 31-year-old physicist was doing at University of New Orleans.

His mission is made possible by grants to the university from four area utility companies. Similar programs, also funded by power company grants, are under way in 11 other states.

Under the auspices of the Oak Ridge Association of Universities energy education department, the program will be expanded to six more states next school year.

To get his message across to restive youngsters, Johnson keeps them laughing while sliding in sad facts.

He startles the kids with an empty soft drink can popping out of a garbage can and clattering on the floor. On that peg he hangs the fact that it took a third of a cup of oil, or its fuel equivalent, to make every aluminum can thrown into the trash.

Johnson reduces that to a bicycle built for two.

Mounted onstage, with two husky teen-agers pedalling, the rear wheel operates an automobile generator. It makes enough electricity to run a nearby black-and-white television set.

Urged on by the roaring crowd, the boys pedal frantically while Johnson capers around the stage, adding to the power load. He plugs in a 100-watt lightbulb . . . a 10-inch fan.

Despite all the bikers' efforts, the TV screen jitters and browns out.

"It would take 500 people eight hours a day, pedalling just, like these guys, to make enough electric power for just one average American," Johnson says, when the uproar has died down.

"If everybody in this gym got out there right now and got out there right now an

"if everyboy in this gym got out there right now and pedalled for the rest of the day, it might make enough electricity to supply two people.

"Think about that when you go home, the air conditioner is running, the radio is on, a television is playing with nobody watching, and all the lights are on."

"It makes an impression."

BANDIT STRIKES BEREAVED HOMES

EDMONTON (CP) — A burglar, named "the obituary bandit" by city police, is preying on the homes of bereaved relatives in the Edmonton area while they attend the funerals of their loved ones.

Police said Thursday the thief, who struck three times in July, chooses his victim by scanning the published obituary columns and picking families attending out-of-town funerals.

Sergeant Elmer Bly, who works in the crime prevention unit, said "it's unfortunate to advertise you are going to be away."

Vern McIntosh, the break and enter squad's acting staff sergeant, said this type of burglary "hasn't been very extensive as yet," but people should be aware of it.

Detective Fred Prather said the burglaries seem "to come in a spurt and then nothing."

Both officers remember that last year, also during the summer, there were about six burglaries traced to obituary columns.

And both men said they feel the same group, and possibly the same person, is responsible for the break-ins last month.

In each case, cash was taken in addition to such saleable merchandise as jewelry, camera equipment and coins. So far, the burglar has taken more than $3,500 in cash and property.

It's possible the robberies are ended for this summer, police said. However, if the bandit is keeping to a familiar area, there has been a lag between notices for out-of-town funerals.

Club Fire Suits Pass $1B Mark

COVINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Total damages sought in lawsuits stemming from the Beverley Hills Supper Club fire now total more than $1 billion, as a result of a third federal class action filed in connection with the disaster.

Cincinnati attorney George S. Roberts brought the latest class action Thursday on behalf of Dorothy V. W. Polley and George C. Polley, Ironton, Ohio, who were among the 164 persons killed in the May 28 blaze.

As in the two previous class actions, the documents filed in U.S. District Court ask for $100 million in compensatory damages and $100 million in punitive damages, on behalf of all persons killed or injured in the fire.

Among those listed as defendants in the cases are the Richard Schilling family, owners of the Southgate, Ky., nightclub; the City of Southgate and the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Piano Lessons . . . at Five or Less

CHICAGO (AP) — Eight was once considered the ideal age to start piano lessons but now leading music educationists recommend that lessons begin at a much younger age.

That's one of the findings revealed in a recent survey conducted by the National Piano Manufactures Association.

To assist parents who are considering investing their money and their children's time in lessons, the association polled educationists at some of the top music schools in the United States.

"Kids are very creative at 4, 5 and 6," said Dr. Robert Pace, professor of music education at Columbia University Teachers College. "It's usually the best time for them to start. Children who can read and recognize primary colors, and who have normal finger dexterity and co-ordination for their age, are probably ready for piano lessons."

Five is a good age for a mature child whose parents have a helpful attitude and an interest in music, said Tinka Knopf, associate dean of Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory. Dianne Flagello of the Manhattan School of Music concurred: "At that age, their minds are so open that it becomes almost a way of life."

A teacher who motivates children can make an enormous difference in achievement levels, those polled agreed. They offered a variety of suggestions for evaluating a potential teacher:

Kalman Novak, director of the Music Centre of the North Shore in suburban Chicago, said one mark of a good teacher is whether pupils learn how to sight-read fluently.

"Many piano teachers fail to teach sight-reading," he said. "I think it's the largest single cause for children dropping piano lessons after the second or third year, yet even children who are not terribly musical can learn how to sight-read."

May Kurka of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, recommended choosing a teacher who has had special training in working with young people.

Many of the educationists suggested that parents consider group rather than private lessons. Fernando Laires, of the National Music Campat Interlochen, Mich., said, "Group lessons have great advantages. For the average young child, 30 minutes alone with a teacher can be too much."

The Manhattan school offers an unusual group program. "We enrol youngsters with their parents in small groups," said Ms. Flagello. "The parents learn at the same time as their children."

There are also non-musical reasons why teachers recommend group piano lessons. Clare Barker of Northwestern University School of Music said a group situation is good for either an aggressive or a shy child. It calms one down and draws the other out.

Pace, creator of Contemporary Group Piano, a teaching concept used by 8,000 piano teachers here and abroad, said: "In a group, a child can see his own unique abilities as compared with those of others. A good group teacher stresses the individuality of each pupil."

"Teaching the piano fosters reading, discipline for study and memory," said Knopf.

"It gives you a whole set of tools to use in other areas of your life," Ms. Barker said. "Children who start out with piano understand music in a total way. Whatever instrument you go to later, you pick up much more easily."

Exotic Pets Belong In Zoo—Humane Society

OTTAWA (CP) — Exotic pets belong in a zoo and not in private homes because imported animals can transmit disease to humans, says Ken Switzer, managing director of the Ottawa Humane Society.

While there have been no human deaths recorded in Canada due to disease transmitted by animals, monkeys can carry herpes B virus, which causes serious brain damage in man, and rainbow lizards can carry salmonella, which also causes human illness.

The humane society and other animal-protection groups submitted briefs to Ottawa's physical environment committee in 1973 and 1975 requesting a bylaw prohibiting sales of reptiles and primates.

"Many people buy exotic pets on impulse and then they don't know how to take care of them or they get bored with them," Switzer said.

Switzer is also concerned about how animals are transported from their native areas to Canada.

"There's a high mortality rate when these animals are captured and an additional risk when the animals are held in captivity," he said.

Christina Fokulsky, administrative assistant of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, said there is legislation in Canada governing the importation of 900 endangered species.

But many animals that are not extremely rare or in danger of becoming extinct are being sold in Canada.

"Once they are in, there's no provincial or federal control over zoos, pet-shops and menageries," Ms. Fokulsky said.

Dr. Harry Rowsell, executive director of the Canadian Council on Animal Care, said a major problem arises when an exotic pet, particularly a snake, grows.

"They have to get rid of it somehow, because a larger snake eats a guinea pig every two weeks," Roswell said.

Roswell said some snakes weigh 48 pounds or more and have to be coied around the hips to be moved.

"Some owners just abandon them."

Roswell estimated that about 75 per cent of all exotic animals maintained as pets die in the first year.

But it is difficult to tell how many exotic pets die of disease or poor care in pet stores and homes because records are rarely kept and few owners send dead animals to provincial or federal laboratories for postmortem examinations.

U.S. Home Boom Hikes B.C. Lumber

VANCOUVER (CP) — A United States home building boom has increased lumber prices in the British Columbia market from 15 to 20 per cent in the last 2½ months, and local builders fear prices will continue to climb.

Because U.S. builders are the Canadian lumber industry's biggest customers, accounting for half of its sales, they tend to set prices for the Canadian market as well. U.S. housing starts are expected to peak in the last quarter of 1977 at an annual rate of 1.93 million units.

The exchange rate, giving U.S. buyers a better deal for their dollar, hasn't helped as far as Canadian buyers are concerned.

"The mills are booked two months solid," said Paul Pannozzo, a lumber purchaser for the Lumberland retail chain. He said that Canadian buyers now are forced to bid higher prices in order to get enough material for their needs.

Pannozzo predicted that "unless California slows down on homebuilding," B.C. prices could go up additional $20 a thousand board feet by 1978. He said there could be a drop in November when cold weather sets in, but prices are likely to jump again in January.

As an example of the recent price jumps, Bob Swannell, general marketing manager for lumber at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., noted that western white spruce 2-B6-4S, considered something of a price indicator in the trade, were selling at $190 a thousand board feet on July 29 but had jumped to $209 by Friday.

He agreed that it's the U.S. housing boom causing the rapid price hikes here and noted that unlike Canada, the U.S. is building a larger number of single-family houses which consume a high percentage of framing lumber.

This year, said Swannell, the U.S. is likely to exceed its record year of 1972 for single-family dwelling starts.

He said that the U.S. boom came at the same time the B.C. forest industry had let production drop somewhat, so with inventory down and demand increasing, prices started rising.

In addition, he said, the demand came at a time of production drop-offs because of summer holidays and fire closures, especially in Washington and Oregon.

$2.9B DEBT IN 3 MONTHS

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government accumulated a budgetary deficit of $2.993 billion in the first three months of the fiscal year beginning last April 1, the finance department said Friday.

The deficit arose from spending of $9.861 billion and revenues of $6.868 billion.

The total budgetary deficit for the 1976-77 fiscal year was $6.3 billion.

Brazil Set to Grab Control of Coffee

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Is Brazil preparing to corner the world coffee market?

As representatives of the Brazilian Coffee Institute, a government marketing agency, conceded in terse statements issued in three world capitals this week, Brazil is buying green unroasted coffee beans "wherever" it can find them — 800,000 bags from warehouses in New York and London and from the government of Colombia.

The substantial holdings of the Brazilian government trading company, Interbras, of the expiring September futures contract traded on the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange also is cited by government and industry sources as evidence of a move to monopolize the market.

The Interbras holdings, the size of which are not known publicly, are of immediate concern to exchange officials and the federal U.S. agency which regulates futures trading.

In an unusual move taken to prevent a default of the September coffee contract, officials of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the exchange have made personal visits to Interbras and other firms holding major "long" or buy-side contracts.

Their request has been simple enough: Liquidate slowly before the first delivery notice day so prices are not artificially inflated.

While some industry sources hesitate to apply the word "corner" to the Brazil buying spree, the London daily newspaper, The Sun, denounced that country in an editorial yesterday for "holding the world to ransom."

"Not content with keeping its own coffee prices sky high, Brazil's state-controlled purchasing unit is sweeping the globe for beans that have the nerve to fall in price," the Sun said.

Some commodity analysts at leading brokerages in New York ascribe a simple motive to the Brazilian move — bolstering coffee prices that have fallen sharply this summer from the high of $3.40 a pound reached in mid-April to the $1.70-1.85 range recently.

Huge Coffee Theft

BRUSSELS (AP) — An international theft ring has stolen 1,150 tons of raw coffee valued at $10 million to $11.5 million, the Belgian daily "La Libre Belgique" reported today. The coffee, grown in eastern Zaire and stolen in transit, found its way into the markets of Europe and the United States.

MP 'Paid' For Fire

COWANSVILLE, Que. (CP) — A witness at a fire commissioner's hearing testified Friday that Social Credit MP Gilbert Rondeau paid him $1,500 last December to set fire to a building owned by Rondeau.

Quebec Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delages recommended that Rondeau be charged with arson along with two young men from the nearby Granby area — Jacques Harbec and Jean Bernier.

Three weeks ago Rondeau was fined $5,050 for fraudulent tax evasion resulting from his participation in a party fund-raising scheme.

The fire destroyed a two-storey building in the nearby Eastern Townships town of Bromont on Dec. 20, the same day that Rondeau was attending the funeral of Social Credit leader Real Caouette in Rouyn, about 400 miles away.

Harbec testified that Rondeau wanted to get rid of the building. He said he accepted an offer from the MP to set it afire.

"I needed money and Mr. Rondeau offered me $1,500 as well as a guarantee for a discotheque that I wanted to open," Harbec said. "I first refused this offer but after two or three similar requests I accepted."

Little AIB Effect On Purchasing Power

The purchasing power of B.C. wage and salary earners increased during the first 18 months of the federal Anti-Inflation Program at about the same rate that it did a year before the program.

This is the tentative conclusion reached in an article in the latest issue of the labor research bulletin put out by the provincial labor ministry.

The article entitled B.C. bargaining and earnings since the AIB, attempts to show how B.C. employees have fared since the controls were imposed in October, 1975.

The author, Jerry Meadows of the research and planning branch, cautions that his review is not an attempt to determine whether the controls program has been directly responsible for any changes in trends.

"Many other factors may simultaneously be influencing some of the above-mentioned data and thus unravelling cause-and-effect is rife with difficulties."

One set of data used is the average weekly earnings figures for firms in B.C. employing 20 or more. These figures represent about 40 to 45 per cent of the work force and include the non-union sector.

The article says the increases in the average weekly earnings seemed to peak at 17.7 per cenf in the second quarter of 1975.

Since the controls were introduced and up until the end of last March, the earnings have been increasing 12.7 per cent per year, compared to 14.2 per cent in the 18 months prior to controls and 15.2 per

HIJACKER SHUT OUT

BRINDISI, Italy (Reuter) — A young Arab who hijacked a French airliner was captured early today when he stepped from the plane to check on refuelling at Brindisi airport and the crew slammed the door behind him.

Police said they overpowered Egyptian student Tarek el Khater, 19, when he was left stranded on the tarmac. The 210 passengers and 12 crew still aboard the Air France airbus were freed unharmed.

Twenty other passengers were released earlier in the seven-hour hijack in exchange for fuel.

The police account of the hijacker's capture differed from an earlier version given by an interior ministry spokesman. He said Khater was captured when the pilot pushed him out of the aircraft into the arms of police.

Khater, armed with an axe and packages which he said contained explosives, seized the wide-bodied jet Friday shortly after it left Nice on a flight from Paris to Cairo.

He demanded to be flown to Libya but was turned away from Benghazi airport there and also from Athens.

The airbus was allowed to land at Brindisi in southeastern Italy after the pilot warned he had only 11 minutes fuel left.

The agreement to refuel the plane came after two hours of negotiations. Khater, who police said was from Cairo, was captured at 1 a.m. when he left the plane to make sure the instructions were being carried out.

After he was taken to police headquarters for questioning, a passenger said Khater "seemed to be mad" during the plane's Mediterranean odyssey in search of an airport.

He kept spraying his body with perfume and reciting the phrase "to be or not to be" from Shakespeare's Hamlet over the airliner's public-address system.

The passenger said the hijacker also referred frequently to three purported accomplices who he claimed were aboard. He called them "X-one," "X-two" and "X-three."

It appeared, however, that he acted alone.

RAPID SAILPAST 'NEVER INTENDED'

The naval sailpast part of the Silver Jubilee celebrations Friday was never intended to be a high-speed search and destroy manoeuvre, armed forces spokesman Denny Ryan said today.

The navy is sorry if some people were disappointed by the speed of the ships but they were assuming something was going to take place that was never planned by the navy, he said.

Ryan said a lot more people would have been upset if the ships had gone by at high speed. The wake of the destroyers would have created havoc, swamping small craft, he said.

The two destroyers, four minesweepers and six smaller craft were part of the Pacific training squadron, and the sailpast was only to show the public an example of the vessels in the training squadron.

Members of the official party also expected a little more action out of the navy.

Ald Frank Carson said: "I guess they'll first sail slowly by and then return for their high-speed manoeuvre."

Alex Adamson, co-ordinator of the jubilee events, wasn't taking any flack for what was happening.

"That was entirely the navy's show," he said. "Nothing to do with me. You just don't order the navy around."

Other events went off much better and the military parade through town drew a good response.

Bomb Blasts Salisbury Building

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — A bomb exploded in the basement of a 13-storey office block in downtown Salisbury today, a week after a similar blast killed 11 people in a crowded department store in the Rhodesian capital.

A witness said two elderly whites were taken to a pharmacy and treated for shock but there were no immediate reports of serious injuries.

The explosion, unlike last Saturday's, occurred after shops had closed.

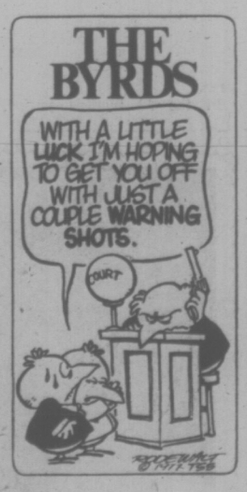
No one claimed responsibility for the blast. Rhodesian security forces attributed last Saturday's bomb blast to black nationalists who are waging a guerrilla war to topple the white-minority regime in Rhodesia.

Windows of the first five stories of Chancellor House were blown out, as were windows in a ground-floor cafe of an adjoining building.

Body Found

The body of a person was found today floating in the water about 100 yards off William Head federal prison. A prison guard on patrol made the discovery shortly before 11 a.m. Colwood RCMP are investigating.



Air Controllers Rebuff Demand to End Slowdown

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air traffic controllers at Canada's two major airports in Montreal and Toronto have apparently rebuffed a request by union leaders to end a work slowdown that has delayed some flights for up to three hours.

"I tried to give them reason, but I wouldn't say my arguments were falling on receptive ears," Jim Livingston, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association said after a meeting with 25 members Friday.

He said there was "considerable opposition" to his pleas for normal standards of operation.

Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers are bitter over federal government action this week which legislated an end to their four-day legal walkout and imposed a settlement in their nine-month contract dispute.

Livingston could not say when the militant air traffic controllers would restore normal operations. The CATCA president added he understood why they were taking such action, but he did not agree with it.

PRIZE ERROR

Typographic gremlins got into the Prevue-Puzzle section in yesterday's Times. The prize affered this week is not $3,000 as appeared but $300 as provided in the rules where $50 is added each week when there is no winner.

Young Boy Prostitutes Prowl Vancouver, Police Say

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police say that more than 200 boys, some of them as young as 12 years old, are acting as male prostitutes in the city's downtown area and some are blackmailing their clients or posing for pornographic movies.

Officials say that it may lead to tragedies such as the murder of a 12-year-old Toronto boy last month after a homosexual orgy.

Constable Al Robson, who has been working on the homosexual scene for nine months, says that "eventually you know what's going to happen — a guy's going to get wiped out."

Police also fear crime figures may attempt to organize the racket, as they have done in United States cities.

Constable Gordon Bader says that Vancouver already is recognized as a major centre for male juvenile prostitution.

Police and social workers believe boys are being recruited in Vancouver and sent to homosexuals as far away as New York and Los Angeles.

Social worker Mel Motley says that only a few of the boys are hardcore prostitutes. Most of them mix hustling with drug pushing, theft and other crimes.

Robson and Bader say pimps are beginning to discover the lucrative nature of juvenile prostitution and some are moving in.

Six persons were arrested in April after a male juvenile prostitution ring was uncovered.

Robson says many of the boys are transients from single-parent or low-income families.

"They're generally in it for the bucks," Bader says. "It's easy money and the risks of being charged or convicted are negligible."

Jim Maitland, a vice squad detective, says some of the boys live with older homesexuals, who support them, giving them drugs, food and money.

He says police can do little to keep boys from hustling except talk to them or refer them to social agencies.

Child welfare authorities usually try to send the boys home, Maitland says, but they seldom succeed.

Robson and Bader are trying to fight the problem by working with the city's homosexual community which they say is concerned about the situation. Workers at homosexual organizations often are able to dissuade the boys from continuing in the hustling business, they say.

One male prostitute, Mark, says he has hustled all over North America — from Seattle to Los Angeles to Toronto — since he started in the trade at age 13.

He says he has been involved in blackmail schemes, posed for pornographic movies and photographs and engaged in all manners of sex acts for countless customers.

Mark says he makes $50 to $60 a night, but could make much more if he tried harder.

Flin Flon Mine Marks Jubilee

FLIN FLON (CP) — Eyes that sweep the skyline of Flin Flon, Man., these days can't help but be attracted to the big "50" sign perched atop the bright red headframe of the mine of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd.

The sign, eight feet high and framed in lights for nighttime viewing, is a visible reminder — as if Flin Flonners needed one — that the company this year is celebrating its golden jubilee — 50 years in business in mining and coal.

Its principal mines, of course, are at Flin Flon and surrounding area where it began operations in 1930.

The company, however, was incorporated in 1927, the date it used to justify jubilee celebrations in 1977.

To help mark it, the company has done more than just put up a big sign in the community where it is the sustaining industry.

On July 1, for example, it staged a giant picnic where the menu included 5,000 pounds of hamburger, 1,000 gallons of coffee, and a ton of salad — all free to the estimated 7,000 that showed up.

In addition, it gave commemorative coins cast, naturally, in pure company copper, to everyone.

The company minted 15,000 of them for employees, suppliers, friends and others. None went to company directors.

So far, the jubilee has been marked by other, perhaps more practical achievements.

In June, the company began producing copper and zinc from its Centennial mine, 16 miles southeast of Flin Flon, where proven reserves to the 1,200 foot level are 1.6 million tons. It has eight producing mines in the Flin Flon area with combined reserves of 17.5 million tons.

It also announced plans to build a $26 million mill and concentrator at Stall Lake mine in the area.

Hudson Bay Diecasting Ltd., its wholly owned subsidiary, got $4.7 million to double its plating and buffing capacity at its plant near Toronto.

Early in the year Hudson Bay Mining got a new president — E. Peter Gush, whose youth — he's only 39 — belies a solid background as a finance specialist, and executive troubleshooter. He comes to the Toronto-based firm from South Africa where he was financial director for Anglo-American Corp., which indirectly controls Hudson Bay Mining.

So far, Gush has maintained a low profile while learning the Canadian operation.

His first real test may not be long in coming.

Analysts and shareholders are waiting to see what the company directors will do about investing the $144 million windfall gained in the controversial sale of its Sylvite potash mines in Saskatchewan to the provincial government.

The sale was completed April 22, strengthening the company's cash flow.

Gush has already indicated Hudson Bay Mining will use the cash to continue its investment in the resource sector, ostensibly oil, gas, coal and base metals. Coal would be a departure but an area where it has some expertise.

The company is unlikely, because it lacks competence in the area, to move into such resource sectors as hydro or pulp and paper.

"While our investment in the fertilizer business has been severely reduced as a result of the sale of our Sylvite division, this area nevertheless remains attractive, and one which provides scope for expansion," Gush said.

Because of its jubilee, the company was anxious to start 1977 on a strong note.

But at the annual meeting in April, it had to admit to a $274,000 loss in the first quarter to go with a deficit of $8.2 million for fiscal 1976. The blow was also hard felt because the company had ended 1975 with a profit.

One disgruntled shareholder at the annual meeting added to the discomfort by accusing the company of bad management of its affairs.

However, the gloom was cast away last month when the company was able to report a profit for the second quarter of $7.6 million.

Much of that profit came from Terra Chemicals International Inc., its fertilizer and chemical subsidiary in Sioux City, Iowa.

As a company, Hudson Bay Mining is not a giant although it ranks among the top 100 corporations in Canada. It is 43rd in assets, 69th in net income and 79th in sales.

Prior to 1965, the company devoted itself entirely to base-metal mining in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Today, it is a diversified natural-resource conglomerate with interests in chemicals, fertilizers, crude oil and natural gas.

"On the eve of its 50th anniversary, the company is involved in a program of consolidation," Gush said.

Restraint Plea Fails To Get Wide Backing

OTTAWA (CP) — Government appeals to big business and labor for voluntary restraint in return for an early end to wage-and-price controls are likely to fall on stony ground according to comments from spokesmen from the two sectors.

The spokesmen feel that controls should be ended unconditionally and indicate that they have trouble accepting the government's call for both a voluntary monitoring agency after the program formally ends and a consultative forum which would include consumer, agriculture and other representatives as well as labor and business officials.

But despite their reservations, labor and business spokesmen are honoring a commitment made last week to Prime Minister Trudeau to take the conditions to their constituents for review.

The Canadian Labor Congress, which has acted as the voice of labor in meetings with government and business, is holding a special meeting of top-level officers of 114 affiliated unions Thursday in Ottawa.

And the Business Council on National Issues (BCNI), a group which includes the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and 140 major companies, has begun consultations with leading businessmen across the country.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business, which represents an estimated 42,000 small firms, is also polling the views of its directors.

But whether these groups can deliver any form of pledge to restraint remains to be seen.

Most of the major unions have throughout the program resisted any commitments in return for an end to controls. Although union leaders generally remain reluctant to speak about their stand until after next Thursday's meeting, some spokesmen say privately they think no concessions will be made.

Some, like vice-president Andre L'Hereux of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), and Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, have rejected the conditions.

McDermott says the government should drop controls on its own and not seek to turn labor and business into scapegoats L'Heureux said earlier this week the CNTU would not restrain wage demands after controls.

Ray Peer, chairman of the 100,000-member Associated Railway Unions, which is due to enter contract talks in October, wants controls off. He adds that union demands will be the same with or without controls.

"We will be serving a normal wage notice and bargaining with the railways as if there were no controls," says Peer.

A spokesman for the United Steelworkers said his union wants an end to controls without a monitoring agency and would also like to see some stimulation of the economy to create jobs.

But he says it will be difficult for leaders to dictate to union locals the wage settlements they must agree to.

Businessmen recite similar difficulties. One Montreal-based businessman said his contacts seemed to suggest most firms do not favor a monitoring agency and have some reservations about the consultative forum.

It will be a tricky proposition to get a pledge to restraint, he adds.

W. D. Archbold, president of BCNI, says it is unlikely there will ever be a uniform view on any subject from the business community.

"Business can commit themselves and try to persuade others to the same course but they can't deliver and speak for such a large sector of society with one voice," says Archbold.

Archbold also says the recent surge of inflation is not the responsibility of those business and labor representatives who have been meeting with government.

After the Shock

The Lions Easter Seal Camp Struggles Back From Tragedy

max low

He picks his spot and sits and strums beside the lake that is so beautiful.

It doesn't matter that his guitar is battered nor that there's a couple of strings missing. To him it's a precious thing. To him, he's Elvis Presley. And he's happy.

Elvis — not even the young counsellors you talk to are sure of his real name — is a handicapped camper who comes from Seaview Rest Home in Powell River. And he's happy to be able to sit and sing by the lake; happy that a terrible tragedy didn't keep him from enjoying his one holiday of the summer.

In the tranquil waters of Cowichan Lake, only a few yards beyond the spot where Elvis sits and beyond the roped-off area where most of the 47 other mentally handicapped adults and children at the Lions' Easter Seal Camp frolic and cool off, seven campers were drowned just over two weeks ago when a boat capsized.

Shock paralysed the camp. The rest of the campers were sent home, their promised eight-day stay abruptly cut short. The 17 staff members and seven volunteers weren't sure what they were going to do. There was even the suggestion that the camp, which has been run by the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children for nine years and is enjoyed by 250 mentally and physically handicapped campers each year, may never reopen.

But it has reopened for the fifth of six summer camps — the final one starts Aug. 19 and there's an open house which the public is welcome to attend on Sunday, Aug. 21. And when I spent a warm (both in terms of heat from the sun and the welcome I got from campers and staff) afternoon up there this week, I found the handicapped people were delighted that it's going again.

And, though some still have the dark shadow of death in their eyes, the staff is delighted, too.

"I was amazed at the way the morale in the camp recovered," Ken Bucci, camp director for the summer, told me. "I mean, I came down to the waterfront and looked out and thought: 'Can I come back here?' But as soon as the campers arrived it was bang, right back into it again."

"As for the way the camp functions now, it's great," the director added. "It's as though nothing happened. And yet, sometimes when you look into (staff) people's faces, you realize they are thinking about it. So people have been hurt . . . but it hasn't affected the way they work with the campers."

The hurt and sadness is one thing camp administrator Judy Nyquist didn't want to talk about. She preferred to praise the dedication of the young staff and volunteers, who put in a long day, getting up at 6:30 a.m. and running programs for the campers until 10 at night.

"And they're not doing this for the money, you know," Judy said. "They come to a place like this because they want to make a career in social work or caring for the handicapped.

"It's real youth power. Young people at work. They don't get enough credit for things like this; too many of them only make the headlines when they get into trouble."

She's right. And, when you look around and see how the staff and the young volunteers (whose ages range from 14 to 19) shower attention and affection on the handicapped, and when you see the camp's waterfront director Bruce Ross-Smith (he was driving the boat on that ill-fated day) helping them in the water, you realize what she means by dedication.

And rather than remember, Judy preferred to talk of the help and support of the community and the donations from groups like Kiwanis, Kinsmen, Rotary Clubs, and Legions as well as the Lions and from many individuals.

These donations, she said, when added to profits from the Telethon and Easter Seal campaigns, help give an eight-day holiday which costs around $250 per person per camp at an actual cost of only $48. And the handicapped campers only pay that much if they can afford it. If they can't, it's free.

After a tour of the pleasant dormitories and the restful lounge and dining room in the main lodge itself, I stopped to chat with some of the handicapped campers to ask how they enjoyed the programs arranged for them — the nature walks, the picnics, trips out to farms, the dances and talent shows in the evenings. And those able to express themselves were unanimous. They thought they were all "great."

"I enjoy everything about the camp — the craft-making, the talent show, everything," said Donna who comes from Powell River. "And I go in everything. I can't swim very well, but I still jump in!"

Lloyd, also from Powell River, told me this was his fourth holiday at the camp and he loves it.

"I can get away from the rest home for a while," he explained. "It's a break. You see all the beautiful scenery and it moves you. I write poetry down by the lake."

Judy Nyquist smiled.

"We have a tremendous number like Lloyd who return year after year for their holidays. They look forward to this all year. You see, there is nowhere else for these kids to go."

Nyquist

BUCCI
. . . morale good

If the handicapped go anywhere outside for their holidays, they look different and people shy away from them, Judy explained.

"Here they feel at home and, instead of shying away, the young counsellors are close to them and good to them and they like it. This is why these camps are super.

"Now you see, Max, why we could not allow this camp to close; why we had to keep it going."

I did see. And as I left the beach area and walked up the path, I looked back over my shoulder and Elvis was still sitting there strumming quite unmelodiously and singing the words to a song that has never been written.

But he was happy . . .

They Watched Their Son Live Again

JOHN

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Doctors appear to have won a touch-and-go fight to save the life of a 12-year-old Colorado boy critically injured in a 300-foot fall down a mountain on Salt Spring Island last week.

John Norman Ryan is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital — as satisfactory as a person can be who is recovering from two skull fractures, two broken elbows, a smashed right leg and knee, broken cheek bone and numerous cuts and bruises.

The boy's parents, Donald and Sonia Ryan, both medical doctors, said in an interview Friday their son's prognosis seems good. So good the family, including John and two brothers aged 15 and nine, is considering returning to their home near Denver next week.

The Ryans, who came to Victoria on July 24 on a two-week vacation to visit relatives, said the fact their son survived the fall is largely due to the speed he was rescued and transported to hospital, and the subsequent medical care.

"We've watched our boy brought back to life," said Mrs. Ryan. "It's like a miracle."

Doctors gave the boy only a slim chance of surviving when admitted Aug. 5, two hours after he fell down a steep slope on Mount Maxwell, a popular park and lookout near Ganges.

The boy lay in a coma for four days.

"It was a period of total despair for us," said Mrs. Ryan, a dermatologist.

Early Wednesday morning a nurse noticed the boy stirring and asked, not expecting an answer, "Are you hungry, John?"

"Not particularly, thank you," he replied.

It was the first coherent sentence he had uttered since being brought to hospital.

From that point on, said Ryan, there was never any doubt his son would recover.

Ryan, a neurologist, said his son shows no sign of internal or brain damage but the fractures will require months to heal.

The Ryans still don't know how the accident happened. John hasn't told them and they haven't asked.

The Ryan family and that of Mark Stuart of Victoria (Mrs. Ryan's brother) went to the lookout early in the afternoon.

Mrs. Ryan said they spent some time at the site admiring the view and having lunch. She took some pictures, one of her son dashing off with his cousin, Ross, also 12.

Minutes later Ross was calling out that John had vanished.

Ryan said he looked down the hill and saw a puff of dust.

"There was no sound, no cry; we couldn't see John so didn't know where he was. He just simply disappeared."

Ryan and Ross's older brother Ian, 15, a member of a Victoria emergency search and rescue team gingerly descended the slope.

They found John unconscious 300 feet downhill crumpled into a rock slide at the end of a crevice and just inches away from a sheer 600-foot drop. Only some twigs and branches had kept him from rolling over.

Ian returned up the hill for help while Ryan stayed with his son, bracing himself against a large boulder, and nestled the boy's head in his left forearm. The danger of falling over the precipice made it impossible to apply any kind of first aid, he said.

Ganges volunteer firemen arrived soon after and within two hours the boy was whisked to hospital in Victoria by an Armed Forces helicopter.

"The rescuers did a great job," he said. "John had bled so much he was in a state of shock. If there had been a delay of another hour or two I don't think he would have made it."

Although the fall occurred in an area not fenced or railed, the Ryans don't blame the parks board who maintain the lookout.

"Anyone going up there can see it's a precipitous slope and should be wary," Ryan said.

They felt, however, there should be warning signs of the danger, maybe even plaques to record accidents that have occurred at the site.

Mrs. Ryan said she had shouted to John to stay away from the edge.

"He's not the usual middle child," said Mrs. Ryan who attended Victoria High School and won the Governor-General's gold medal in 1952 as top graduating student in the province.

"He's a straight A student, loves to ski and plays the clarinet. He's venturesome, too," she added.

Miracle Taken Off Critical List

Miracle, the courageous killer whale calf, continues to cling to life as the poolside drama at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel ends its third day.

Sealand manager Angus Matthews said today she has been taken off the critical list although she gave attendants a scare early this morning when she stopped swimming and appeared to sink.

But the attending medical experts believe that was just a normal pattern and she had simply stopped to rest. Previously she sank to the bottom and would have drowned if not raised by her handlers and floated on a styrofoam pad.

Although off the critical list, her condition is still serious, Matthews said.

"There are a lot of notches between being a healthy animal and being taken off the critical list," he said.

But the fact she is alive at all continues to amaze her guardians.

Wounded by gunfire and a boat's propeller, she languished for about a week in Menzies Bay near Campbell River covered with algae and rife with infection and parasites.

She was transported to Oak Bay Thursday, and her survival fight earned her the name Miracle.

A blood test today showed a slight increase in the white cell count, confirming that infection is still there, but that was to be expected, Matthews said.

If she survives her ordeal, her chances of being released in the next couple of years are slim, Matthews said.

She will have to be raised in captivity because of her early feeding patterns. The calf has been hand-fed more than a week.

Matthews said Sealand is committed to seeing her thorugh survival and subsequent care.

When residents of Menzies Bay began feeding her fish, it was the first reported case where a free killer whale has been fed by man.

Jay Hyman, a consultant in marine animal medicine in New York became involved with Miracle's plight while here on vacation.

He was part of the crew that brought her from Menzies Bay and while there observed her feeding.

"I'm glad I have photographs of it because my colleagues in New York will not believe me otherwise."

Reporter Nicholson loses again

Iago Would Have Loved It

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Othello, in the Classic Shakespearean tragedy, is driven to madness by the wicked Iago who constantly misleads, confuses, torments and generally makes life hell for him.

The new Othello is a game of strategy marrying chess, checkers and backgammon, that perhaps would have been more aptly named Iago for the confusion and torment it can cause.

The 20-year-old representative of the Toronto firm which is distributing the Japanese-invented game in Canada, issued a challenge to this reporter, and generally misled, confused and tormented him before scuttling him to utter defeat in front of his colleagues in the Times newsroom.

Wearing a traditional Japanese kimono, Miss Hoita began a cross-Canada tour in Victoria Friday and today giving demonstrations of the game in Hillside and Mayfair Malls.

The game was developed in 1971 by Goro Hasegawa, a Japanese pharmaceutical company worker who named the game Othello, because his father, a Shakespearean scholar, thought it a game of dramatic reversals.

The game is deceptively simple. It takes about half a minute to learn, and it's easy to believe the promotion literature that claims it takes a lifetime to master.

Othello is easier to learn than chess, more complex than checkers and less dependent on chance than backgammon. It's a board game for two played with black and white discs on a field of 64 squares.

The object is to outflank your opponent's discs and end up with a majority of discs on the board in your color.

In Japan, five million sets have been sold, and at the last national tournament 20,000 players entered.

More than 25 other countries are distributing the game. In Canada, distributor Irwin Toys says the game has become its largest seller in terms of advance sales.

Miss Hoita's enthusiasm when talking about the game belies the customary Japanese reserve redolent in her traditional kimono.

But it's no wonder — the costume is for promotion only. The University of Toronto student is a fourth generation Canadian. (Her grandparents are from Victoria.)

The promotion began as a summer job for Miss Hoita, but already she has plans to take the game to Canadian universities on weekends once classes at U of T start again.

She said her mother told her she would get bored with playing all the time, but she says there's no way that will happen. She says she is addicted to the game.

The game has become the latest U.S. college craze and recently Caltech Institute on the west coast challenged Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the east coast to a game by telephone.

Plans are already afoot for a Canadian national Othello tournament with the winner receiving an all-expenses trip to the proposed world championships.

Included with each set (about $13 which seems expensive considering its simplicity) is a coupon inviting the owner to become a member of the Canadian Othello Federation.

Miss Hoita said she hopes reigning Japanese champion, Fumior Fujita, a 27-year-old barber, will come to the Canadian championship.
